Includes round-trip transportation, two nights hotel accommodations, taxes, baggage handling, two full breakfasts, two dinners, all admission as stated in the itinerary and three days of guide service. Please call for an itinerary.

A Day at the Races Special Event

Wednesday, July 12th
$60 pp.

Enjoy an exciting day at beautiful Belmont Racetrack. Package includes transportation, reserved seating admission and lunch. This is a fabulous deal. Dress is semi-formal: jackets for men; dresses, skirts or pant suits for ladies. No jeans or sneakers!

Annie Get Your Gun Broadway Matinée

Wednesday, June 28th
$120 pp.

A legendary musical is made new again with style, sass and show-stopping stars: Bernadette Peters as "Annie Oakley" and Tom Wopat as "Frank Butler." The Irving Berlin masterpiece spins out one hit song after another, including "There's No Business Like Show Business," and "Doin' What Comes Naturally." Includes orchestra ticket, lunch at Panevino Ristorante and round-trip transportation.

Music Man Broadway Matinée

Wednesday, July 19th
$125 pp.

America's all-time favorite musical with "Seventy-six Trombones" and an entire score of classic hit songs returns to add even more luster to a very brightly lit Broadway. And Broadway's hottest director/choreographer, Tony Award winner Susan Strohman, gives the marching orders. Package includes orchestra ticket, lunch at La Veranda and round-trip transportation.

Beat The Down Price Increase

Increases will take effect July 1st

Madison Avenue Quality at Factory Prices!

CAVEAT EMPTOR (BUYER BEWARE)

Don't be misled by advertisements for European goose down comforters at supposedly "SALE PRICES". We'll show you that most of those ads do not represent good values at all. Just because these advertisements are from major departments stores - do not be fooled-all down is not alike.

The quality of goose down is measured in fill power (also know as loft). Fill Power is the amount of cubic inches one ounce of down will fill. Our 800 plus Siberian Goose Down will fill between 800 and 850 cubic inches of space. "The Company Store" catalog always lists the fill power of their goose down. Bring in their catalog and we'll generally save you 50% off their prices.

Goose Down Comforters are an investment, with proper care a fine quality comforter will last a life time. Our high quality 100% cotton shells, or tickings, are divided into baffle boxes. The baffle box has a mesh channel separating the top from the bottom of the comforter. The baffle allows the down to give you maximum loft without collecting in one section of the comforter. We do not cater to the consumer that is more interested in price than quality. Our most valuable asset is our customer. We will only sell a product that we believe to be the highest value at the best price. Cheap low quality down should fill garage cans not pillows and comforters. All our goose down pillows and comforters contain 100% goose down even though it is legal to combine 70% down and 30% feathers and label the item 100% goose down. Remember feathers are those things with quills, down is similar to tiny balls of cotton, absolutely no hard quill. Our goose down comforters and pillows are machine washable because they only contain down.

The larger the individual down cluster the higher the fill power. The higher the fill power the better the comforter will insulate thus providing more comfort to you. Since you are spending 1/3 of your life in bed it should be as luxurious as possible. - Why not?

The Conquest Of Sag Bridge

British Led Team, Sponsored By The Royal Academy, Is First To North Haven

By Dan Rattiner

(The author has led three expeditions to the top of Mt. Everest.)

I was approached in early May by a representative of the Royal Academy in London to head up an expedition over Memorial Day weekend in Sag Harbor, New York, to attempt to be the first to cross the new Sag Harbor-North Haven temporary bridge. The old bridge, which had been in place since 1931, was supposed to be kept intact while a new permanent bridge was built but last December the old bridge collapsed. That the authorities said they would put in a temporary rickety bridge and have it opened for the summer crowds at Memorial Day was of interest to the London authorities. To be the first to cross would be a dangerous task and a considerable achievement.

I thought about it for a night and then the next day wrote the Royal Academy that I would accept the challenge and put together a team of adventurers for the task. Within a week I had signed on four men: Afleck Alam, a Sherpa from Tibet who is a trusted friend and had helped me climb K2 six years ago; Cecil McIntyre from New Zealand, a climber who is legendary for his use of ropes; Roland LaFarge of France, who was part of the disastrous and finally aborted attempt to climb Everest in 1986 and Olaf Nordik from Finland, whose bravery is legendary.

We set up base camp three days before Memorial Day weekend at the tip of Long Wharf in Sag Harbor less than 200 yards from the construction. I toured the site that night and was appalled at the condition of the project. The temporary bridge, the bridge would never be completed in time for the Memorial Day rush, and in that I was correct. The opening of the span was postponed for one week which made me very happy as it would give us more time to get the lay of the land.

Cecil McIntyre arrived on Air New Zealand at Kennedy Airport the following day and took a Hampton Jitney out. That same day Roland LaFarge flew on a chartered jet provided by the government of France to the Gabreski Airport in Westhampton Beach, and was taken by taxi to Sag Harbor.

Late that day, Olaf Nordik from Oslo having sailed in a 140 foot four masted schooner across the Atlantic against the wind, a project that had taken almost two weeks, glided into a slip at Long Wharf.

Finally, Alflek Alam, my Sherpa friend, arrived by train with a group of porters carrying supplies. All that remained was the appearance of the twelve year-old Range Rover which had been promised us by the Royal Academy and was coming by freighter from London.

This proved to be a worrisome business. We were told it was held up by a Port of New York

We spent a bitter, miserable night there, huddled in our tents, the wind howling outside and the rain beating on the canvas.

only parts of which were in place, seemed even more flimsy than I had imagined. I learned that only $500,000 dollars was being spent for the span, a miniscule sum and that the temporary bridge would only be used until Labor Day when the new bridge was completed. How it could last even that long was beyond my imagination.

Also, it seemed to me from the looks of it, that

Leonardo DiCaprio is reportedly renting a mansion in the Hamptons along with Tobey MacGuire from Cider House Rules and several models, Carmen Cass and Gisele Bundchen.

New York City Commissioner William Diamond and his wife, Regine Traulson have just moved into the main house of the Whitefield Mansion in Southampton. For those unfamiliar with it, Whitefield is the classic Hamptons "cottage" on Hill Street building in Southampton, designed by Stanford White with gardens designed by Frederick Law Olmstead. Regine held her Moroccan dinner party there last year, and that seems to have turned their heads. And so, they have moved from their earlier house on the beach.

Anyone thinking of getting engaged ought to consider the Diamond Of Hope, the 9.71 karat affair being auctioned off at Sotheby's in Manhattan on June 15. It has been donated by its owner Veronica Bird and proceeds from the diamond sale will help fund the study of autism and prednisone headed by Stephen Mott at Georgetown University.

New York City designer Christopher Totman has opened his second store at 66 Newtown Lane in East Hampton. Totman's designs which have been sold exclusively at Barney's New York for two years, are rich, whimsical and wearable according to trade publications. His first store is on Mott Street in New York.

Betty Paraskevas and Michael Paraskevas have produced On the Day the Tall Ships Sailed, a wonderful colorful children's book to be offered up for the Fourth of July. Another creation by the pair, the animated series Maggie and the Ferocious Beast had its television premiere last week on Nick. Jr.

Tony and Jean Hitchcock will be celebrating their twenty-fifth anniversary running the Hampton Classic Horse Show this summer. It is now the premier outdoor horse event in the country. The Crown Royal Grand Prix event on Sunday, September 3, now sports a $150,000 prize, an amount that sets a new standard in the equestrian world.

Among those attending the party at the home of Alan Wilzig of Water Mill the other night were super model Kylie Bax, Zone Diet entrepreneur Johnny Phillips and Armand Assante who stars in the new Showtime movie On the Beach which was previewed that night

Others looking to party hearty should be looking for invitations to affairs at the homes of Ted

GREAT UNSUNG HEROES OF BORDEAUX

CARSIN 1998 (Premieres Cotes de Bordeaux) 10.95 131.40
Juha Beglund purchased this somewhat forgotten vineyard in 1990. Refurbishing the winery and vines soon became his passion and today his efforts are well reflected in the high quality wine of this vine. Full flavored with rich, ripe fruit. (4816)

BRIAND 1996 (Bordeaux Superieur) 8.95 107.40
Soft and delicately fruity with ripe cassis fruit and generous flavors. Fertile clay-limestone and sandy soil yield a wonderful wine here. (4813)

GARDUT 1998 (Premieres Cotes de Blaye) 9.49 113.88
One of the oldest properties of the region, Chateau Gardut has been in the Revaire family for 4 generations. Made from 75% Merlot, this 1998 is smooth and supple with a soft, ripe berry character, cocoa nuances and supple tannins. (4811)

JOUANIN 1996 (Cotes de Castillon) 9.95 119.40
Located along the right bank of the Dordogne River, the Cotes de Castillon produces a pleasing wine that offers immediate charm due to its high proportion of Merlot. (4801)

MAISON-NEUVE 1996 (Montagne-SL-Emilion) 10.95 131.40

A superb combination of 60% Merlot, 30% Cabernet-Sauvignon and 10% Cabernet Franc, this 1996 combines uncommon backbone with a framboise scented, richly textured and agreeable style. (4805)

PEYRAUD 1996 (Premieres Cotes de Blaye) 8.95 107.40
Powerful and full, the wines from this small estate offer great value in Bordeaux excellence and have become one of our most popular Bordeaux. (4807)

ROC DE GRIMON 1996 (Cotes Castillon) 8.95 107.40
From one of Bordeaux's oldest winemaking regions, this vineyard sits on lush, fertile soil and produces supple, deliciously fruity wines. (4800)

ROLAND LA GARDE 1998 (Premieres Cotes de Blaye) 9.49 113.88
This is a warm, fruit laden wine that displays dense, concentrated flavors which is quite uncommon for the region and a direct result of late harvesting. Healthy, balanced tannins ensure long aging in the bottle. (4815)

ROUSTAING 1998 (Bordeaux) 8.95 107.40
This is a very old estate and still has a priory wall and window from the Middle Ages that is incorporated into the cellar. Very claret-like in style with a predominance of red berry fruit aromas and flavors, this 1998 is ripe and full bodied with a superb balance. (4803)

THEBOT 1996 (Bordeaux) 8.49 101.88
A delightful full-bodied red with vibrant fruit and a touch of spice. (4812)

DE VERDUN 1998 (Medoc) 10.49 125.88
This blend of Cabernet Sauvignon and Merlot displays plenty of sweet strawberry fruit with a ripe texture and mouthfilling flavors. Delicious now, it will continue to thrive for many years. (4817)

VIEUX CHATEAU LONDON 1995 (Medoc) 14.95 179.40
A large proportion of Cabernet Sauvignon gives a classic structure to this wine. Aged in oak for a full year, it displays good body, intense cassis fruit and great harmony. (4814)

SUMMER UNSUNG HEROES SAMPLER $119.95
TWELVE BOTTLES - Consists of one bottle of each of the twelve Unsung Heroes shown here (6939)

GIVE YOUR CHILD A HEALTHY SMILE

Many parents don't realize how early dental problems can occur, or just how important those "baby teeth" are!

Prolonged and frequent bottle or breast feeding can cause baby bottle tooth decay. Diets high in sugar from fruit roll-ups, sticky candies, juice and soda can also cause lots of cavities. Thumb and pacifier habits can cause malformations of the palate.

Children are not done losing their baby teeth until they are 12-13 years old! These teeth hold the spaces for permanent teeth, shape your child's face, and help with speech, eating and chewing.

Dr. Nancy Cosenza specializes in dentistry for children from infancy to their teenage years. At Hampton Pediatric Dental Associates, we know that not only children, but their teeth, are entirely different from adults. In fact, pediatric dentists require 2 years' additional training and education beyond dental school!

(There are only 5,000 pediatric dentists in the U.S., and we're the only pediatric dental practice in the Hamptons!)

Dr. Janet Stoess-Allen, our orthodontist, believes in early orthodontic intervention for those children who will clearly benefit from it. Early treatment presents the opportunity to influence jaw growth in a positive manner, lower risk of trauma to protruded upper incisors, correct harmful oral habits, and improve esthetics and self-esteem!

Our office is colorfully painted and cheerfully designed - a definite "kid-friendly" environment. Our staff is genuinely warm and cheerful too!

Call us at (631) 287-8687 if you have any questions or would like to arrange an appointment.

Remember that good dental habits and experiences started in childhood will last a lifetime! We know how to make kids leave the dentist's chair smiling — and their parents, too!

longshoreman's strike and then after that by the US Customs who claimed it didn't conform to American pollution standards. That was quickly fixed however, and on Tuesday, one day after the American Memorial Day holiday, it came in under the captainship of a young Liverpool intern working at the English Embassy in Manhattan. All smiles, he dispelled our worrisome expressions – we were just seventy-two hours to the planned assault – and he gave us the keys, had us sign a receipt and then went back to New York on the Hampton Jitney as planned.

On Thursday morning we learned from the authorities that the bridge would have its official opening to traffic at the pre-dawn hour of 5 a.m. With this news of the planned opening of the bridge, we broke base camp and proceeded through a vicious thunderstorm to a new location at the base of the approach to the bridge, adjacent to a wooden Chamber of Commerce windmill structure. We made a new camp there on a small gravel beach which we called Camp One.

We spent a bitter, miserable night there, huddled in our tents, the wind howling outside and the rain beating on the canvas. At 4 a.m. we sent out Cecil McIntyre with stakes, a sledge hammer and ropes to mark the trail to the top of the entry ramp to the bridge. He returned half an hour later, shivering with wet to announce that the opening of the temporary bridge had been postponed yet again as two of the panels had not yet been placed in position. It should be open by 2 p.m., he said, news he had received from the 'night watchman and even that time was a tentative one. Nevertheless, he had been able to place his stakes and ropes to guide us if the terrible weather continued, which it did.

The storm that now raged against the tents reminded me of a storm I had endured while attempting to climb Mount Cook in New Zealand in 1997. How we survived I don't know. But at 11 a.m., we sent out Aflek and Olaf, who soon returned to say that the bridge had been completed by the workmen under heavy tarps – they are the true heroes of this story – and thought the official opening wouldn't take place until 5 o'clock, but we would be welcome to make our attempt across the bridge at noon.

At 11:55, with myself at the wheel of our forest green Rover, Aflek by my side as navigator, Roland LaFarge and Olaf Nordic in the back seat on the two-way radio to Cecil back at camp, we started the Range Rover and I put it into first gear to begin moving into the storm for the final assault. There was a thick fog now, and in the rain, even with the headlights and the fog lights on, I had difficulty following the trail laid out earlier by McIntyre. At 11:58, I briefly felt that I should turn back, but I overcame my fears and with Aflek giving me the thumbs-up sign, downshifted into second and proceeded into the temporary crossing.

Looking down outside the driver's window, I could see right through the bridge, all the way to the choppy water a hundred feet below. The bridge was nothing more than a flimsy steel grating. The Range Rover seemed to slide left and right on the slippery surface as it moved slowly along. Would it hold us? I could see in the rear view mirror beads of sweat breaking out on the foreheads of both Roland and Olaf in the back seat. Aflek, on the other hand, was cool as a cucumber.

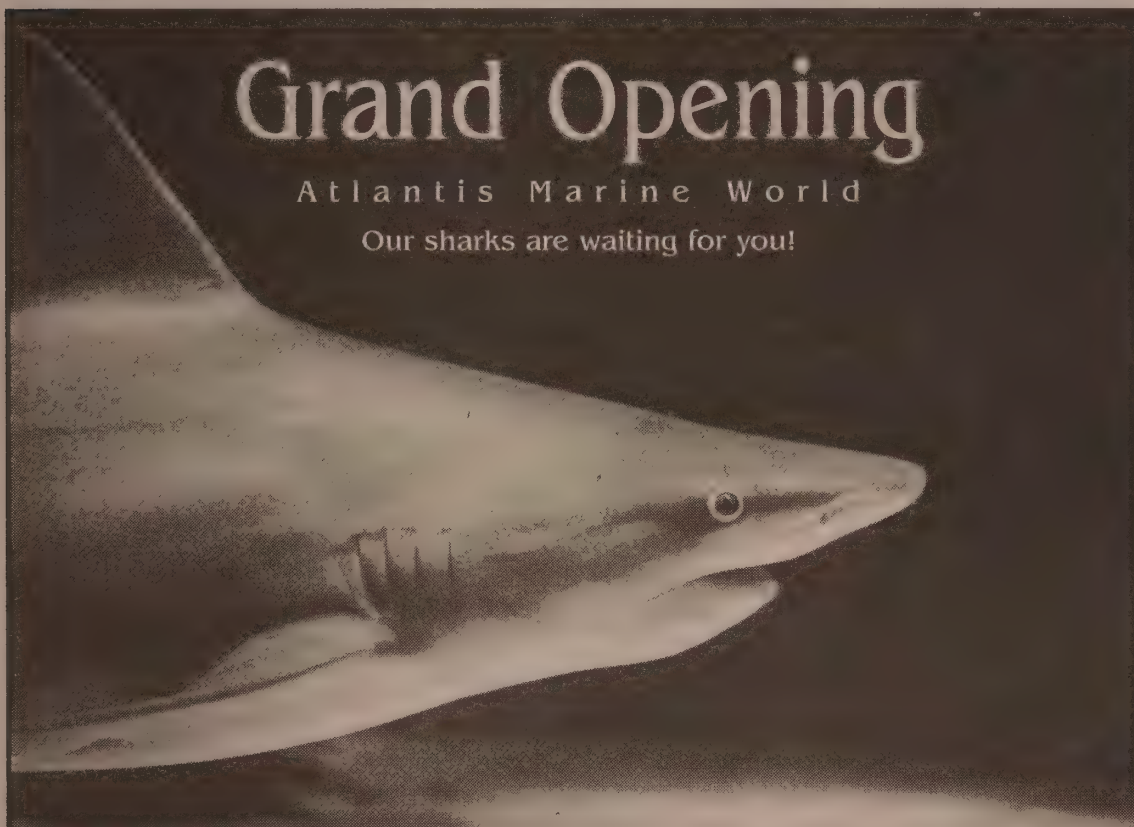

"Walk in the park," he smiled grimly at me.

Within a minute we passed the halfway point and now there'd be no turning back. Fear can make you do strange things. I now thought of the moment where we had come to the end of Cecil's ropes. We would die a terrible death if the bridge gave way. I rolled down the window and vomited onto the bridge, leaning out as far as I could so that our rear tires wouldn't slip over it.

Now a lightning bolt struck the light stanchion in front of us. The whole bridge shook. But now we were heading down hill and with Olaf screaming over the two-way radio in Finnish, something that Cecil at Camp One could not understand, we arrived to safety on the other side.

We were in North Haven. A sweet bucolic, virtually uninhabited peninsula by comparison to the bustle of Sag Harbor on the mainland behind.

I pulled off to the side of the road and as planned got out of the car, and in the rain on the shoulder there, planted the flag of the Royal Academy of London. Then I collapsed and the next thing I knew was that I woke up here in Southampton Hospital where I am dictating this story.

Cell Phone Horror

A Member Of The Wired Generation Meets Rules And Regulations At A Deli

By Dan Rattiner

So I pull up in front of this deli and with my two teenage sons get out of the car and go inside to order some sandwiches for lunch. There's a young woman waiting on people at the counter, she's about twenty, and she's waiting on the only other people in the store: two guys, who are wearing workman's uniforms and have written a lunch order on a 2x4. They have chips and soda; she brings them sandwiches; we wait.

Finally, she rings them up and then she looks at the three of us. "I'm sorry, but I can't wait on you," she says to me very nicely.

"Why not?" I ask.

"You know why not," she says. "You have a cell phone. Last time you were in here you had a cell phone. We don't allow cell phones."

She points to a bulge in my shirt pocket. There's no doubt about it.

"I'll take it out to the car," I say.

My sons stand at the counter, dumbfounded, not saying anything. As I leave I pass two men and a woman coming in. They're talking about what they are going to be ordering for lunch and I know by the time I get my cell phone out to the car and walk back in, we'll have to wait some more, but what can I do, there's no other deli within a mile of this one.

After a while, the three people leave and my sons proceed to order their sandwiches, tuna fish to get in line by my son holding our place and it's at this moment I realize I've told an important business associate to call me back. A lot of money is riding on that phone call; I really just can't leave the phone in the car. What if he calls and I miss it? So, while son number one has gotten the soda and is now rummaging through the potato chip display to make his choice I run back outside and I grab the phone and I stick it my pocket in a way that maybe it's a handkerchief or a wallet or something and I come back inside.

Now I make my way to the front of the crowd - there's about eight people in there now waiting on line - and immediately I realize that I have caught myself in a dilemma.

This counter girl is a very strict person. If the phone rings, she could very well leave the bread and the sandwich makings right there on the counter, glare at me angrily, look at the crowd and say "Next" and that would be the end of our lunch.

"Please don't ring, please don't ring," I keep and bacon on a toasted roll, ham on rye with mustard. I order a turkey sandwich on a seeded roll with ketchup and mayonnaise.

The woman goes off to make the sandwiches and one of my sons goes over to a cold drink cooler and fishes out a couple of Coke Cola cans. Newer people are now coming into the deli and my other son is holding our place at the counter, following the unwritten deli rules that everybody knows and goes by.

The woman is making our sandwiches. I return whispering under my breath to my cell phone.

The counter girl is now busily putting the mayonnaise on the second piece of bread; she's already put ketchup on the first piece.

Keep going, keep going.

Now I wonder if during the brief interval, when the phone was out in the car, it rang. This cell phone is one of the most remarkable gadgets I've ever owned. If it has rung, the words "One Missed Call" appears on its screen. If I press another button, I can read the phone number of who called on the screen and if I press still another number I can have the phone call back. But, did anyone call?

I sneak the phone out of my pocket and before

I can even look at it, I realized things have gone from bad to worse.

"Next," the counter girl says. I look up. She's staring at me with a look of utter betrayal.

"I was just leaving," I said. "Kids, come out when it's all added up, I'll give you the money." I run out the door and go over to the car. I'm hyperventilating, I look down. There's been no phone call, no opportunity missed. It was for nothing. I sit in my car and put all the windows down. It's hot and stuffy with the windows up. I wait.

Maybe my leaving the store so immediately was not enough. Maybe the woman was in there waiting on everybody else, glaring at my sons, making them feel uncomfortable because of the indiscretion of their father. He's a liar, her eyes would be saying. What kind of a father do you call that? A fly will start circling over the unfinished sandwiches as she takes the orders from some of the others.

From where I'm sitting in the car, I can read everything that's on the front door of the deli. No bare feet. No dogs allowed. No roller blades, the signs read. There are three of them, all different, all written at different times as different transgressions took place. I know there's a sign that reads, No Cell Phones, but it's gone. Somebody has ripped it down. But I know the rule and she knows I know the rule. After a time, one of my sons appears at the window of my car.

"It's fourteen dollars and fifty five cents," he says, holding out a hand.

I open my wallet and slide out a twenty - my whole life is now in twenty dollar bills, thanks to ATM machines which dole out twenties - but that's another story. And, he runs back in to get the order and to pay for our purchases.

"Don't give her any kind of tip." I tell him as he reaches the deli door.

I'm rattling my cage.

I look down at my cell phone again; there's no message on it that anybody's called. I stroke it with my hand, like you'd stroke a friendly miniature poodle. I really can't live without this cell phone. With it I'm linked up to the world. I have speed dial to my office, my home, my daughter, my mother, my wife, my best friend, I can get email on it, I can get the stock prices of the three stocks I own on it, anytime of the day. I can listen to my answering machine in case I missed a call; I can consult my address book, my appointment book, I can change my telephone's ring so it can play Mozart or Beethoven or a Strauss waltz, or I can turn its volume off entirely.

About the only thing I can't do on it is dictate a story for Dan's Papers. Yet. And this silly counter girl is enforcing a law against cell phones like she's the head of the Gestapo. I don't get it. •

Three East Hampton High School Students Are Put Under House Arrest At Six Flags

By Dan Rattiner

It was the kind of project that a teacher could be proud of. Eighty East Hampton High School juniors would go by Hampton Jitney bus to Six Flags Amusement Park and, accompanied by their physics teachers, calculate the centrifugal force of certain rides, their timing, speed and rate of acceleration. The project would be one of the last of the school year before summer, and it would be a learning experience and also a very good time.

The "fill in the blank" lab sheets were handed out on the bus and the students were told to fill them and then hand them in at the end of the day when they returned to the parking lot for the bus ride home. Unfortunately, for three of these students, the lab report would never be filled out and they would learn nothing of physics. Instead, they would learn about corporate stupidity and what it is like to be held in a windowless room ten feet long and four foot six inches wide for much of the day.

The buses left East Hampton at 7 a.m., arriving at Six Flags Amusement Park in Jackson, New Jersey at about 11:30 a.m. Each of the students had been told to bring extra money for food, souvenirs and some of the special rides for which the amusement park charged extra.

Mike Tibbets, of Springs, was given a fifty dollar

Will paid for his own. Mike, who is a close friend of Marak's, paid for their purchases with the fifty. An elderly lady with thick glasses, according to the boys, took their fifty dollars and correctly returned them a twenty and two tens and some coins as change.

They then went on another ride, called Virtual Reality Star Wars and then, hungry, decided to stop for lunch at one of the fast food places scattered around the park. Again Mike paid for Marak with Will buying his own lunch. Mike gave the vendor a twenty dollar bill he had gotten at the churros stand. The vendor held it up to the light, took out a laser pen and scanned it. The twenty failed the test.

"This is counterfeit," the vendor said. "We have to report it."

"OK," the boys said.

The boys waited for about ten minutes until two people arrived. One of them was male, a security guard with blue pants and a yellow stripe bill by his father. The other two boys, friends of Mike's, who would be involved in the strange journey, were Will Fink and Marak Squires and they were also given money.

Upon arrival the eighty kids dispersed about the park in small groups. Mike, Will and Marak went on the Medusa roller coaster together and several other rides. Around one o'clock, the three boys stopped at a stand that sold churros, pretzels and soda.

on the side, the other, the person in charge, was a woman with a clipboard and radio in the back of her belt.

It was one o'clock.

"We have to go down to the office and fill out some paperwork," the woman said to Mike. "You two boys can stay here," she said to the others.

But the boys were curious about the experience and did not want to be separated. "Well, we'll come too," they said. And they did.

On the walk to the "office," however, something chilling happened. The three boys, of course, had been walking together and now began to talk.

"Separate them," the woman said to the security guard. "Don't let them talk to one another." The security guard indicated they would have to walk far apart and not speak.

Soon they had gone outside of the public area of the park, behind a fence to a small, unmarked building. This building – and the boys would be in it until nearly five o'clock – consisted of a reception area with a woman at a desk, two conference rooms to the right and a narrow, windowless holding pen on the left.

Marak, who was placed in the pen alone, later described it as ten feet long, four and half feet wide, with a bare plywood bench running along the wall. The entry to the room was a Dutch door, the bottom half kept closed. It was about four feet high. "Too high to jump over," as Marak put it. And the upper part of the door was kept open to let air in and out. He was not free to go.

The woman directed Mike into one of the rooms on the right and Will into the other, where, in the next half hour, they would be interviewed separately under fluorescent lights. Soon they would be brought into the holding pen and Marak would be taken into the conference room for his version of events.

On arrival, the boys were told to empty their pockets because the lady needed to see if any other money was counterfeit. They did so.

The boys told their story about the old lady with the thick glasses. "She would remember us," one of the boys said. "And she probably still has our fifty."

"That won't solve anything," the woman said.

During the next two and a half to three hours the boys were either kept in the holding pen in spite of their protests or taken to the rooms to what the boys believed were attempts to "break them" and get them to confess. At one point an attempt was made to call the boys' parents.

Will's mother answered the phone.

"This is Six Flags," the woman said. "Your son has been caught trying to pass counterfeit money."

Will was put on to talk to his mother and try to explain. She said that she would talk to him when he got home. She asked to speak again to the woman and when she came on asked whom he was with.

The woman said, "We can't tell you their names because they are minors."

Several times during the afternoon the boys asked if they could leave and they were told they could not. It was pointed out that two of the boys had not been accused of anything. They were told they had come voluntarily and now, since they were minors, they couldn't be released unless it was to an adult guardian.

The boys noted there were eighty students and several teachers from the high school inside the park and all they had to do was walk around for a while until they found them. But no, it was necessary for the adult guardians to come to the office. This made no sense to the boys.

At five o'clock the boys began to become upset. They told the woman they had better be at the entrance of the park at five thirty because that was when the two Jitney buses were to pick them up to take them back to East Hampton, a four hour ride away.

The woman claimed that a paging system had been used to try to locate the boys' teachers, but there had been no response and the boys said that they must have a poor system because everyone was right there.

Time was growing short, and after all these

Quack Off

Elizabeth Moskalenko, 12, Repeats As Best Quacker 2000 in Flanders Event

By Yvette E. Somekh

The theme was the 50's, complete with Jennie and the Party Lights, hula-hoop contests and Jingles the Clown. Face painting and duck drawing were just some of the activities. There were antique cars for your viewing pleasure and Italian ices served out of old Good Humor iceboxes. The event? Why, the Second Annual Quack Off sponsored by the Suffolk County Parks Department. It was held at the Big Duck at the Sears Bellows Park in Flanders and it was a gas.

Martin and Jeule Maurer built the Big Duck in 1931. The Riverhead farmers thought it a clever way to promote the sale of their Peking Ducks. Big Duck's original roosting place was West Main Street. In 1936, the Maurers relocated, duck and all, to Route 24 in Flanders. Big Duck remained there until 1987 when his nest was slated for development. BD's then owners, Kia and Pouran Eshgi, donated him to Suffolk County where he was moved to his current location at the entrance to the Sears Bellows County Park.

Back to the Quack Off. Richard Martin, director of Historic Services for the Suffolk County Parks Department and Therese Milanese, co-ordinator of Special Events, put together this event for the public. After the success of the December Duck lighting, the Parks Department determined Big Duck, as a local celebrity, should host an event to kick off the East End summer season. This was a natural.

At exactly 1:10 p.m., the stage was readied for the main event. The quack-off was divided into four categories: the 3-6 and T-12 age group, families, and individuals. This was serious business. The first group (the little kids, of course) lined up stage right and waited their turn. Each child, clutching his or her stuffed duck, went up on stage and gave their best interpretation of our webbed-footed friends. The next category, the 7-12 year olds, was a rather impressive sounding lot. Some might have even had those little things in their throats to make them sound more duck like. Quacking around the Big Duck is never taken lightly. The families came out next. Some told tales of family quacking drills, others had scheduled rehearsals. One family flew in from Tennes-

PATRICK EWING WE LOVE YOU BUT ENOUGH IS ENOUGH

By Dan Rattiner

I have nothing personal against Patrick Ewing. He's an excellent basketball player, not up there with Michael Jordan or Shaquille O'Neal or Magic Johnson perhaps, but a notch below, a seven foot center and leader of the New York Knicks for the last fifteen years. But enough is enough.

I am not a regular follower of professional basketball. On the other hand, it has not passed my notice that at no time during these fifteen years have the Knicks won the NBA championship and on at least five occasions when it has come down to the wire, I've seen photographs of Patrick Ewing on the back cover of the New York Post or the New York Daily News with a look of utter frustration on his face, as at the very last second he has either fumbled the ball or missed the shot that would have won the game.

Ewing has a very large, broad open face with a lantern jaw and a broad set of teeth. He's not the handsomest guy on the planet but there are certain expressions of emotion that he can give that are of Academy Award caliber. They include determination, massive effort, hope, fear, disappointment, chagrin and pain. Of course he has all the other emotions as well, he can laugh and smile, but there seems to be a hollowness about them.

Last year at age 35, Ewing was injured with a knee problem and didn't play much, and there was a lot of debate in the paper that perhaps he had reached the end of the road and it was time to find a new young star with the same abilities to take over the leadership. But Ewing said no. He really wanted to get the NBA Championship ring on his finger before he retired and when he came back to play this year, it was found that all his skills were still intact and at the end of every game he had the most points of any player on the team and the most rebounds and he was just as good as he ever was.

Anyway, this past week, the Knicks played the Indiana Pacers best of seven for the league championship. The winner would go on to play see. Another sounded like a bunch of chickens. Finally, it was time for the individual category. This was obviously a group that spent hours practicing just for this one day, this one hour, this one moment. Their concentration was fierce. This group separated the men from the boys - uhh - the ducks from the ducklings.

The judges had their hands full. After a sweat-filled three minutes the winners in each category were chosen. And more importantly, the overall winner, the year's best quacker, would be announced. There was a drum roll, the audience fell silent. All eyes were on the stage. In the 3-6 category, the winner was.... Brenda. For the 7-12ers...Elizabeth. The Family category's winner was the Periconne Family. (That was the family that sounded like chickens.) In the next to the last category, the group before we got to the greatest quacker of the year, the Individual category, the winner was Elizabeth. That was Elizabeth's second win. You could feel the audience response. They knew. We all knew what this meant. Elizabeth gave a little bow acknowledging the win. But that was just the beginning for our Elizabeth. A hush fell over the crowd. The emcee was given the envelope for the winner, the contestant with the best quack for the year 2000, and the one to get this year's Rubber Ducky. The winner? Elizabeth, of course. The crowd went crazy. There were cheers, people jumped to their feet as she received her Rubber Ducky from Mr. Quack Off 1999.

I had a chance to interview the new Miss Quack Off immediately following her triumphant march down the aisle, proudly wearing The Ducky. She wanted to thank her sister Marie for advising her of the contest, her parents for driving her to Flanders, and you, her loyal fans for believing in her. She wanted all the little ducklings to know that practice got her where she is today.

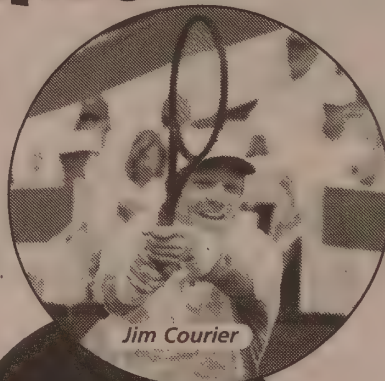

It was a wonderful day in Flanders. This reporter feels privileged to have been in the presence of such greatness. Thank you Suffolk County Parks Department for sponsoring this event, thank you WLNG for covering it live, and thank you Dan, for sending me.

New Report Finds No Evidence Of Electrical Ignition Source Aboard TWA Flight 800

By Jerry Cimisi

In a document dated April 28, 2000, the Boeing Corporation submitted a fifty-two page report to the National Transportation Safety Board detailing the aircraft company's investigation into the possible causes of the explosion of TWA Flight 800 almost four years ago, July 17, 1996. In summary, Boeing said there was no indication that an electrical spark ignited the center wing fuel tank, a scenario the NTSB has long claimed as the most likely cause (no matter that no specific mechanical evidence has been found to support this theory).

A few lines into the report, it read, "This tragic accident launched the most complicated and comprehensive wreckage recovery, aircraft reconstruction, and accident investigation in the history of commercial aviation."

In "Appendix A - Investigative Evidence," The report says, "No evidence was found to support a conclusion that specific electrical systems or component of the 747-100 Fuel Quantity Indicating system (FQIS) ignited a fuel/air explosion."

There are seven tanks in a 747-100. Fuel indicators display how much fuel is in each tank. Under the oversight of the NTSB, the recovered fuel indicator from the center wing fuel tank was analyzed where it had been manufactured, in Coon Rapids, Minnesota. Some components of the indicator were damaged. "It was found that all five of these components had failed either because of saltwater exposure or because of impact." No evidence was found that the indicator failed or was damaged by "excessive energy being intro-

Indicator System wire, and again failed to come up with signs of electrical arcing.

A separate electrical system for monitoring fuel is the fuel flow system, which is placed in the fuel line to each engine. The cockpit Voice Recorder for Flight 800 has the captain saying, "Look at that crazy fuel flow indicator there on number four."

Maintenance records show that in the two years previous to the destruction of Flight 800, that plane had undergone nine maintenance actions in regards to the fuel flow system; three were in regard to the number four engine fuel flow. The work done in those maintenance actions, according to the report, were, "replacement of flight deck indicators, cleaning of connectors, and replacement of actual fuel transmitter...." The report goes on to say that the NTSB's own study of recovered fuel control equipment showed "there was no physical evidence or an internal failure of the engine No. 4 fuel flow indicator...."

Recovered wire bundles from the fuel flow indicator systems also showed "there was no

duced into the center fuel tank...."

The fuel probes, which measure the actual amount of fuel, also showed no evidence of electrical anomalies. It had been theorized that an electrical arc due to damaged wiring caused the fuel to explode, but, the report reads, "There was no evidence of arcing on any of the pieces and fragments of fuel probes." A meeting was held at a NASA laboratory to study the Fuel Quantity indication that any damage had occurred that might account for the erratic fuel flow indication. There was no evidence of arc damage other than that caused by the accident itself." The "Summary" of this section of the report says, "None of the fuel system components inspected and analyzed showed any evidence of being the ignition source that initiated the accident."

Because the 747 was a quarter of a century old, there had been speculation that this had been a catastrophic, if rare, failure of an ageing craft. In 1998 the Aging Systems Task Force was formed by the Air Transport Association to study the capability (and possible erosion) of systems in aircraft more than twenty years old. The task force studied eighty-one planes. According to the Boeing report, "No wiring safety-of-flight concerns were identified that would require immediate action on any of the inspected airplanes." It had also been speculated the fuel scavenger pump might have been operating improperly: specifically, operating without having been turned on. But tests conducted at Wright-Patterson Air Force base showed "no signs of electrical stress or failure. The NTSB report said, "No evidence was found that the scavenge pump in the accident airplane had been powered at the time of the accident."

According to the Boeing report, the company thoroughly investigated possibilities of electrical arcing. "It has been postulated that two bare wires with their exposed conductors lying very close together, but not shorting, may result in an undetected ignition path in the fuel tank."

In one test Boeing stripped a wire entirely of its insulation and with another wire "had its insulation removed in a smaller area to expose the conductor. The wires were placed close together, but not touching: specifically at a distance of the width of the insulation of the second wire, which was about ten millimetres or 10/1000 or an inch. A charge of 1,100 V ac rms, 60 Hz was needed to bridge this small gap. When the space between the wires was reduced to one millimetre, or 1/1000 of an inch, the arcing voltage required was 350 V ac rms Hz. When the wires were tested at 13,000 feet, the approximate altitude of Flight 800 at the time it exploded, the ten millimetre gap required 800 V ac rms, 60 Hz and a four millimetre gap to arc at 350 V ac rms, 60Hz. The report concludes: "...to develop an ignition path as a result of damaged wiring in the tank is highly unlikely because the spacing of the two exposed surfaces must be held extremely close together over an extended period of time without actually being in short or intermittent short condition."

The thickness of the insulation of all bundled wires is ten millimetres; thus the electrical cores of two touching wires are twenty millimetres apart.

Boeing did further tests in this matter to ascertain if any sort of debris between two such exposed wires could lower the voltage needed to cause a spark and found that this hardly changed the above results: "...a voltage level greater than 350 V ac was required for a breakdown between electrodes with conductive debris (steel wool) between them."

Further along this line, Boeing took "center tank quantity probes, compensators and wiring that had been in service for twenty-three years." They were "subjected to abnormally high voltages through a range of altitudes from sea level to 50,000 feet." The result was that "breakdown values" were almost exactly the same for old wires as they were for newer wires. "The breakdown at sea level was always greater than 3,100 V ac (4,3000-V peak). The breakdown values at the accident altitude...were always greater than 1,700 V ac (2,400 V peak)."

The Fuel Quantity Indicating System operates at 30 V.

Fuel Probes were subjected to high voltage that caused arcs, then were submerged in Puget Sound for four weeks. Even after this long submersion evidence of the arcing could still not be found. The fact that no such evidence was discovered on wiring in the recovery of TWA Flight 800 points to the likelihood that electrical arcing as an ignition source did not occur.

When Boeing, at the request of the NTSB, removed wiring from other planes for inspection, "the results showed that damage to the wiring was insignificant and was mainly related to removal of the wiring from the airplane for this study."

While the Boeing report may be controversial for not merely showing the NTSB's theory is

Who's Here:

On a recent, exquisite Sunday morning in June, Howard Fast and I discussed GREENWICH, his latest novel. Howard Fast is an energetic and productive 85, and he seems unlikely to slow down any time soon. Born in New York City on November 11, 1914, he published his first novel, Two Valleys, before he was 20. Within a decade he earned a considerable reputation as a historical novelist concentrating on tales of American frontier life. When does one know that one is meant to be a writer?

"Being a writer is all I've ever wanted to be," said Fast.

A prolific writer, Fast has written roughly 50 books which in turn have been translated into some eighty-two languages, and have sold millions of copies worldwide. He writes a weekly column that is published in both the Greenwich Time and Stanford Advocate. He may be one of the most widely read writers of the 20th Century.

During World War II Fast worked as a correspondent for a number of periodicals as well as for the Office of War Information, originating The Voice of America. It was during this period that he addressed the issue of the abuse of power. Later, he became concerned with the suppression of Labor Unions, and Communism as the basis for a utopian future. This last passion resulted in Fast's being blacklisted due to his political activities. He was even imprisoned for refusing to identify Communist sympathizers before the House of Un-American Activities Committee. For ten long years no publishing house would accept his manuscripts. But these challenges did not prevent him from either writing or publishing. He began writing detective novels under the pseudonym E.V. Cunningham and since no one would publish him under the Fast name, he was forced to establish his own Blue Heron Press. Out of these experiences came Spartacus, Citizen Tom Paine, and Freedom Road. Spartacus, the story of a slave revolt in ancient Greece was published in 1951 by Fast's own Blue Heron Press, but it took another nine years for it to become a bestseller. After Spartacus was made into a feature film in 1960 with an all-star Hollywood cast that included Kirk Douglas, Howard Fast's life began to change, and the iron curtain that had come down on his and many other's careers appeared to be lifting. Fast tells the story of this time in an autobiographical work called, Being Red: A Memoir, the writing of which was inspired by his son who wanted to know what had happened to his father during those years.

Howard Fast likes women. And to prove it he wrote six books on the fictional Lavette family, beginning with The Immigrants in 1977. The saga became a TV mini-series which ended in 1985 with The Immigrant's Daughter, the story of Barbara Lavette, a woman with political aspirations. The sixth and final installment, An Independent Woman, appeared in 1997. The women in these books are strong, determined and bright. In Fast's latest book Greenwich, the character Sellig says to his son, "Most women are...wonderful. They have to be just to survive."

When I asked Fast if he shared that sentiment with the Sellig character he responded, "It is far more difficult to survive as a woman than as a man. And without them the world would be a very sterile place. What mystifies me is why do women like men?"

And certainly after reading Greenwich, one might ask, why indeed? Greenwich begins with a dinner party and ends in murder. And while all the characters, both women and men, play interesting roles in the outcome of the evening, the major players in the murder scenario, as in wars, are men. The story takes place in a 48-hour period in Greenwich, Connecticut. Eight people are invited to the exclusive home of Richard Castle, former Assistant Secretary for Latin American Affairs turned Venture Capitalist, and his passive and beautiful trophy wife Sally. In 1980, under Castle's order, 3 Catholic nuns, a group of Jesuits and a lay worker were all murdered in El Salvador. Twenty years later, on the evening of the dinner party, a story appears in The New York Times that threatens to re-open the investigation. What unfolds is a story of deception, greed, infidelity, and murder. How all these characters lives intermingle and interrelate will have you hungrily turning the page to find out what happens next. On one level, it can be seen as just a tale about eight people who happen to live in Greenwich, but on another level Howard Fast has never been afraid to ask the big questions.

Howard Fast has had an interesting and challenging life. After all he has experienced and seen I wondered whether he believes in God. He responded,

"Yes, I do, but I'm not at all sure that God loves us or cares very much about us. I think the weight is on us."

For him, in life as in his books, the bottom line is personal responsibility.

There is a line in Greenwich in which the Sister Pat Brody, a dinner guest and player in the drama says:

"We are all assassins, the good and the bad, the meek and the proud. There is the sin that we all share – the sin of indifference."

It would seem that through the strong, female character of Sister Brody, Howard Fast's voice was coming through loud and clear. Why had this character served and suffered in El Salvador? This was not the first time he had chosen to put El Salvador in his books.

"El Salvador is one of the many shameful episodes in our history. We trained murder squads that murdered 50,000 people in El Salvador and supported a dictatorial, fascist government."

In an era when ethics and morals seem to be vanishing from the American landscape, Howard Fast continues to hold a mirror up to America that says, LOOK.

"I see a nation where the only drive is money. The only worship is money. A nation that cares about very little else. A nation split between the very rich and the very poor. We've reached this point because war and prosperity go together. We can turn things around in America because we can do anything we are determined to do. It is a question of whether or not we chose to do anything about it. I write about these things in my column every week."

In Fast's book Greenwich, the strong willed nun Pat Brody says to the Monsignor,

"I am in your life to remind you that people are human, weak, often mindless."

I asked Howard Fast in his opinion what sorts of things in life were not forgivable?

He took a moment, and after a considerable silence said,

"All things are forgivable. Not all things are forgettable."

Luckily for us, despite the fact that The New York Times has not reviewed a single book of his since 1950, Howard Fast can take the unforgettable things of life and create wonderfully entertaining books around them that are enjoyed by millions of people around the world.

If you would like to meet this fascinating author, he will be coming to the Hamptons for the first time in his young life, as part of the Writer's Series at Guild Hall, on Sunday, June 11th, at 2 p.m., to talk about his latest novel, Greenwich. It is an opportunity not to be missed.

The Sheltered Islander By Sally Flynn

Observations of an Islander #109

"...hullo Mutta, hullo Fahta..."

(Song "Camp Grenada" with gratitude to Allen Sherman) High noon on Saturday, May 27, we sat and sat. The parents of thirty kids waiting at Piccozzi's Dock for the return of our sea-faring offspring from their week long adventure on the schooners the Harvey Gamage and the Lettie G.

At about 4pm, a huge schooner rounded the corner and moored by the Yacht Club. I got all excited. Surely the Yacht Club would let us come there and get our kids. Nope. They were delivered one Boston Whaler at a time to Piccozzi's Dock. First came all the baggage and sloppily rolled sleeping bags. I found my daughter's things and knew she had survived.

The next boat brought the first survivors. Some leaping into their mother's arms crying, some kissing land, all swearing they'd never get on a boat again. I stood waiting. My daughter came, I held out my arms and waited.

But she was too cool. She bypassed the scene I was all ready to create and jumped in the van, robbing me of my parental right to embarrass her. She maintained her "Fonzie-esque" cool until we were safely inside the house.

Dropping on the couch, the diatribe began.

("...hullo Mutta, hullo Fahta...")

"It was the Ship of Puke, Mom. Everybody got seasick except for me and three other kids. Everybody was throwing up everywhere. One kid even threw up on another kids' bed. People were crying for their mothers, wetting their beds and everybody was gross because we couldn't shower the whole time and some kids didn't bring deodorant.

"Bonine and Dramamine pills were like gold Mom. It was like cigarettes for prisoners, you could trade anything for sea-sickness pills. You packed two boxes for me Mom, I was like, the richest kid on the ship.

"Everybody wanted my sleeping bag with attached pillow. The pillows they gave you were damp and smelled like other people. Their blankets were green and scatchy. I was the only one who got to sleep without breathing ship stink all night.

"Except I didn't sleep the whole time. There were three girls in my cabin and we each had a different watch, so every four hours we all had to wake up.

"I had the bottom bunk and everybody stepped on my face."

("...take me home, oh Mutta, Fahta, take me home, I hate Grenada....")

"It rained the first three days. It was so cold on the night watch in the rain, I wore all my clothes on watch and I still froze to death. When I had to watch the bow, the waves came up and over and soaked me to the skin. It was horrible, like a nightmare, but you're awake.

"I didn't need an alarm clock to get up. The sound of the morning pukers woke everybody up. The cook was really good and we had these terrific breakfasts every morning. There was plenty to eat because half the kids who came in the galley, looked at the food and ran upstairs to puke. It was great.

"The bathroom was The Toilet From Hell. First of all, if you had to go, you had to wake up whichever puker was in there sleeping next to the can. Then you had to clean off chunks, then pump the toilet ten times, go, then pump it twenty times or it would overflow and if it did, you had to clean it up, it was so gross. And you can hear everything in the toilet. We knew which kids had gas, you knew if a boy was in there because they pee louder and never pump twenty times afterwards Mom, they're such pigs.

"It took us three hours to hoist anchor. You pump this huge lever and the chain comes up one link at a time. The anchor chain was ninety feet long. Most of the kids couldn't work because they were so sick. Even the hottest boy in our class. We named him PukeMaster. We all tried to help each other. It was pure survival Mom. We knew we had to hang on till Saturday.

("...wait a minute, guys are swimming, playing baseball with naked women...")

"Then the sun came out and it all got so beautiful. We spotted dolphins. We saw the Amistad in Mystic, Conn. I got you this little antique hand mirror. The seasick kids stayed that way, but with less wind, it didn't blow back in their faces when they heaved over the side. I couldn't believe how everybody was being so nice to each other. The popular kids were helping the geeks and the jocks weren't being their normal stupid selves. I saved a clean pair of underwear for coming home today. It was a fantastic trip Mom."

("...Mutta, Fahta, kindly disregard dis letta...")

review: edward clapp at guild hall

By Joan Zandell

The Writer's Series at Guild Hall began this past Sunday with two young poets from the Master's program from the University of Glasgow; the East End's own Edward Clapp, and fellow classmate from Manchester, England, Bethan Lewis.

The readings were reminiscent of the Beats, with the poetry style and delivery that might have been performed in coffeehouses across America in the late 50's. The work seemed influenced by Ginsberg and Ferlinghetti. Edward Clapp's stream of consciousness combined with a touch of rap was performed from his first volume of poetry, SPOON – in which he expresses love not only for a lover, but occasionally for his refrigerator, and then for life in all its complexity. Bethan read from her anthology UNDER THE WEATHER... Their poems were shorter, angrier, with an economy of language and imagery peppering and punctuating her more structured pieces, revealing an intricate web of emotions. The contrast between the two; Clapp's longer and more dramatic performance pieces combined with Bethan's short and to the point pieces, became an interesting dialogue, between male and female, a spirited exchange of ideas revolving around the people and things that matter to them most.

Clapp and Lewis work well together. Having memorized the words to most of his poems, Clapp would move across the stage, stopping to punctuate the occasional word or phrase, active, gesticulating. Lewis, on the other hand, would stand quite still holding her position center stage behind the podium, delivering her poems with humor, occasionally challenging Clapp with, "Oh yeah? Wait until you hear my next poem!"

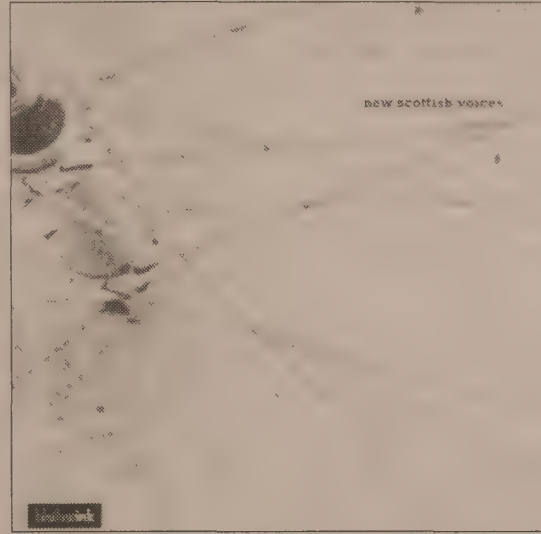

The next moment she would react good-naturedly to Clapp's delivery of his poem in response to hers. It was an evening of stream-of-consciousness-storytelling, with the energies of these two young poets playfully feeding one another as they fed the audience their thoughts, feelings and perceptions.

Edward Clapp goes on to the Edinboro Fringe Festival from here. He will then spend the remainder of the summer teaching a creative writing workshop in Scotland. Clapp is the editor of the first Glasgow Spoken Word Anthology, Spoke 1 and is a member of the University of Glasgow Creative Writing Executive Board. He plans to return to the East End when his Master's Degree at the University of Glasgow is completed.

Bethan Lewis, who participates in the CD Spoke 1, will return to Manchester, England to visit her family before returning to the University of Glasgow to complete her Master's degree. •

Boeing

extremely improbable, Boeing has also been under fire in recent months in regards to the Flight 800 incident and air accident investigations as a whole. In the autumn of 1999, Boeing announced that it would look for evidence that a missile or bomb brought down Flight 800. It would oversee its own tests. Recently, a company spokesman, Russ Young said, "We asked that there be testing done on parts that had not previously been tested."

Boeing contracted an outside lab, AR Tech Testing, in Chantilly, Virginia, which, among other equipment, used a scanning electron microscope to look for evidence that the plane had been brought down by a criminal act.

Last November, Young was quoted in The Seattle Times as saying, "The NTSB seems to have crossed off various theories, but there has been no 'Eureka!' discovery."

But in a phone interview on June 1, Young said that no evidence of a missile or bomb has been discovered by these tests.

Many families of the victims of Flight 800 are suing TWA and Boeing. When Young was asked if the lack of missile/bomb evidence then made Boeing culpable, he responded that such was not necessarily the case. "This just tells us what it wasn't; it doesn't tell us what it was."

He went on to say that there has been talk of settlement between Boeing and some of the families. "That is customary in most lawsuits." But he added no settlement has been reached and as of now the case against Boeing will go into court in Manhattan on February 1, 2001.

Meanwhile, if Boeing's report to the NTSB seems to absolve itself of any mechanical failure in connection with the death of the 230 people on board the plane, there are those who question the logic of having one of the interested parties play any role in the investigation of a transportation accident.

Senator Charles Grassley of Iowa, who in May of 1999 led hearings concerning the FBI's conduct and procedures of the Flight 800 investigation (on criticism that the Bureau was pushing too hard to find a bomb or missile the cause of the explosion of the plane), said that Boeing, in continuing to pursue the bomb/missile theory was damaging the company's own public relations and putting it at odds with the conclusions of other governments investigatory agencies such as the NTSB, FBI and ATF.

It must be added that the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms has no expertise in terms of investigating transportation accidents. Perhaps Grassley meant the CIA, which concluded that the eyewitnesses, who saw apparent missile streaks ascend or shoot across the sky, were actually seeing the plane rise up after it had first exploded. Many eyewitnesses have denounced the CIA version of events.

At any rate, a report by Rand, one of those organizations referred to as a "think-tank," described the NTSB as understaffed and underfunded, and said that the "party system" could only encourage analysis and conclusions that were in the interests of the parties undertaking them.

The report, in part, read, "NTSB investigations of major commercial aviation accidents have become nothing but preparation for anticipated litigation."

The NTSB's 1999 budget was $55 million, which is about the cost of one jetliner.

In fact, recently the NTSB has been doing its own last minute "missile theory" investigation. In May, off the coast of Pensacola, Florida, NTSB investigators videotaped the paths of Stinger missiles being shot off into the sky. The missiles were launched from Elgin Air Force Base, under meteorological conditions that most closely matched those of July 17, 1996, when Flight 800 was destroyed. The purpose of the missile shoots is to determine if they match eyewitness accounts of the incident. The FBI, which led the interviewing of eyewitnesses, did not give the NTSB those interviews until almost two years later.

On August 22-23, the National Transportation Safety Board is scheduled to have its final - and public - board hearing on the matter of Flight 800. Each team of investigators (metallurgy, data recorder, etc.) will present their work to the five board members who will vote on whether to accept the findings for each category of the investigation. ●

elaine k.g. benson, her daughter's column

I don't understand how we can be expected to keep up with all that is happening here. There are so many social and charity events that it makes my head spin. I try to remember where I'm supposed to be but sometimes I lose the invitations or I don't get to read the papers and I find myself slightly dizzy. A friend just told me that she makes lists of what she missed.

This past Friday there was a fundraiser at my gallery for The Group for the South Fork and The Nature Conservancy. I was headed off to a party afterwards but by the time we cleaned up and I closed up, I was too exhausted to head off to East Hampton. A friend stopped by and walked me across the street to "Kiplings" where there is live Jazz on Friday nights. The rainstorm had just started and we were lucky that it held off 'til after the environment benefit. I was very pleased to get a table and happy to just sit quietly listening for a bit. Kiplings is almost always fairly quiet and very friendly. You usually run into only "locals". By the way, the restaurant is also open for lunch.

On Saturday morning there was an event for children at Estia's Restaurant on the Bridgehampton/Sag Harbor Turnpike, organized by "Fish Unlimited." Nan Orshefsky made fish prints on T-shirts with the kids. There were demos of tying flies and making lures. The kids were taught to cast and the restaurant supplied pancakes to these young anglers.

Saturday night was an almost impossible night if you tried to do everything. I had an opening at my gallery. There were also openings at Arlene Bujese's gallery and the Millenium gallery and LongHouse Reserve (new work by Dale Chihuly) in East Hampton. I may be missing a few more openings but, as I said, I simply can't keep track of them all. We had a full house here at my place. As soon as I closed I rushed off to The Maidstone Arms Restaurant in East Hampton. There was a

"Spring Art Show" that was a fundraiser for Southampton Hospital. Jarvis and Coke Anne Wilcox were sweet enough to open their restaurant to the event. Jarvis hung all the work. The show was wonderful. I was lucky enough to have three paintings in the show. Arlene Bujese also did double duty. She hosted her opening and continued on to the Maidstone Arms where she had three prints of her own on exhibition. I know I got her into it but somehow I didn't feel guilty. I was in the same boat and it was good to see her. The only glitch I saw was that the valet parking attendant was trying to please everyone against all odds. He was charming but there was simply too much work for him. He did a great job. The reason for the Spring Art Show was to extend the fundraising community for our hospital. It is easy to think that fundraising for the Southampton Hospital should be in Southampton. The name can be misleading. Obviously the Hospital serves the entire East End community. We all may have reason to need the hospital and although I wish we could avoid it, the hospital is very necessary to our survival. I was happy to be involved with this committee and very happy to see what good

TWENTY YEARS AGO

"A Domestic Quarrel"

June 6, 1980

For many months, Richard Salter of Far Rockaway would come home from work to find that his wife had turned the thermostat up to seventy degrees. He would turn it down.

"Why do you keep it so hot?" Salter asked one day.

"It's not hot."

"We're supposed to keep it at 68."

"You don't have to be home during the day," Mrs. Salter said. "It's cold."

"Seventy degrees is un-American," Salter replied. And he turned the thermostat down.

But the next day, he came home to find that the thermostat had been turned up once again.

"Did you do this?"

"Yes."

"Well, leave it down, dammit."

And Richard Salter jerked the thermostat down to sixty-eight degrees.

The next day, a Saturday, Salter went out for awhile and came back to find the thermostat at seventy once again.

"What do you think this is, Saudi Arabia?" he yelled, jerking the thermostat down once again.

Sunday was the day that events took place in the Salter family resulting in the article in Newsday.

Salter came downstairs in his bathrobe and saw his wife, right there in the livingroom, in the act of turning up the thermostat.

"I don't believe this," Salter screamed. Without waiting another moment, he ran into the dining room, opened a drawer and took out the .38 caliber pistol he kept there to protect the home against burglars.

"Get away from there," he said, pointing the gun at his wife. "Get away from that thermostat,"

Mrs. Salter, startled, took one step back. Salter motioned with his gun. "Step back further," he said.

Salter took one step forward, reached up, and turned the thermostat down still again.

"This is the last time, You leave the thermostat at sixty eight. Is that clear?"

"Absolutely."

At this moment, Salter's stepson Michael walked into the room.

"What's going on?" he asked his stepfather.

"You stay out of this."

"Put away the gun, dad."

"I'm not going to hurt anybody. I've just got to persuade your mother to leave the thermostat at 68 degrees."

One hour later, after Salter had gone out to get the Sunday paper, Michael had a talk with his mother.

"I don't think it's right," he said. "I don't think he should threaten you with a gun like that."

After awhile, Mrs. Salter and Michael decided that the best thing for Salter might be to have him arrested. The gun could have gone off. They had to teach him not to do a thing like that ever again.

When Salter came home with his paper, he opened the door to find two strange men in his livingroom.

"Where's my wife?" he asked.

"We're police officers, and we have a warrant for your arrest. Stand against the wall and put your arms over your head."

The police officers frisked Salter while informing him of his rights. He was being charged with criminal possession of a weapon and reckless endangerment.

"Okay, Mr. Salter. Let's go."

Mr. Salter was handcuffed to one of the officers, and was led out toward the front door. But as he crossed the livingroom rug, he asked the officers to wait just one moment please. He wanted to do one last thing.

Reaching out, Salter very carefully turned the thermostat down one final time. Detective Edward Garrity, who reported this incident to the Newsday reporter later in the day, could not recall what this new setting was as they left.

*Offer expires on June 30, 2000. No fees or closing costs for lines up to $150,000. Lines terminated prior to 3 years from the closing date are required to repay all closing costs. Refinances of existing BNB Home Equity Lines are subject to closing costs. Maximum loan amount up to 75% of the appraised value of your home less all outstanding mortgages. 20 Year Term: 5 year interest only period (draw period), followed by a 15 year amortization period. Principal amortization of 180 payments of principal plus interest at a variable rate. The initial rate until January 1, 2001 on lines closed by June 30, 2000 is fixed at 7.99%. Rate converts to Prime thereafter. Annual Percentage Rate (APR) may vary and adjust monthly based on changes in the Prime Rate as published in the Wall Street Journal. Maximum lifetime APR of 18%. APR includes interest only and no other costs. Example: Monthly interest payment based on 7.99% on each $10,000 of outstanding principal is approximately $66.58. Thereafter, approximate monthly interest payment on each $10,000 of outstanding principal based on the Prime Rate (non-discounted) on May 17, 2000 would be $79.17. Property insurance is required. The terms of this offer may be withdrawn or changed at any time.

The beautiful David Yurman boutique, on Madison Avenue, will be hosting a kick-off cocktail party on Wednesday, June 14, for the "Bow Wow Luau," the August 19, fund-raiser for the Animal Rescue Fund of the Hamptons, at the home of Ellen and Chuck Scarborough. The Vered Gallery will preview the specially designed artistry, (dog and cat collars, rags and leashes), by David Yurman, on Saturday, August 5, chaired by Mary Ellen Kay, Senior V.P. Prudential Securities. The items will be auctioned live two weeks later at the "Luau". Information and reservation call, 329-5480.

The "HOT LATIN NIGHTS" benefit for the Retreat has just gotten hotter! Mayfair Diamonds and Fine Jewelry, newly opened on Main Street in East Hampton, provides the jewels for the cast of The Sopranos, both on and off screen, and being that they will be sponsoring the one-of-a-kind jewelry auction at the July 8, benefit for the Retreat, who knows who will attend the July 8, benefit at the home of Bob Hurst; especially since Marcy Gandolfini will be chairing the auction with Lauren Kolchinsky. The event chaired by Eileen Ekstract and Caroline Hirsch can also now boast Michael Bolton as the Honorary Chair. Reservations and information, 329-5480.

East Hampton resident Alexander Russo will present a solo poetry reading at Bridgehampton's Clayton Liberatore Gallery on Sunday, June 11, 3 p.m. and concludes with wine and cheese. While Mr. Russo is known as a painter whose abstract Mexican landscapes (recently featured at the Arlene Bujese Gallery), he has been writing poetry for several years, has written two books, including one which features East End women artists and is a member of the East End Poetry Group.

East Hamptonites Terri and Phil Baird are off again with a group of Friends of AKIM USA to raise money for the mentally disabled children of AKIM. This time, they're on the way to Paris, France. A cocktail reception will be given in their honor by the Israeli Vice Consul to France and will be joined at the reception by other AKIM friends from Antwerp, London and Paris. A high point of the trip will be a private preview showing at the Louvre Museum of six paintings done by the children of AKIM. Phil and Terri anticipate Congratulations to Water Mill resident, Susan Barry Roden, a recipient of the Local Hero Award given by the Susan G. Komen Foundation and BMW of North America. Ms. Roden, who is chairperson of the South Fork Breast Health Coalition and a two time breast cancer survivor, was recognized for her efforts in fighting breast cancer on Eastern Long Island. One of two Suffolk country residents to receive this honor, Ms. Roden was presented the plaque on May 25, commemorating her achievement.

An open casting call will be held on Saturday, June 10, for the feature film Untitled directed by Todd Solandz, the director of Welcome to the Dollhouse, produced by produced by Killer Films and Good Machine, the producers of Boys Don't Cry, Sense and Sensibility, The Ice Storm, to name a few. Casting will be held at 100 West 84th Street (between Amsterdam and Columbus), Manhattan. They will be looking for: nine to ten year old, very intelligent boys, fifteen to nineteen year old athletic, offbeat and "nerdy types" from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., eighteen to twenty-three year old males with cerebral palsy who are non-wheelchair users, between 2 p.m. - 4 p.m. No acting experience is necessary, just show up with a photo. Call 212-982-3432 for information.

Two Take Five winners, in two weeks on Long Island? Yes, it's true! Rosalie Pulitano of St. James, was one of four first-prize winners of $38,353 each for the Take Five drawing for Thursday, May 4. Donald Wisotsky, of Patchogue, was one of four first-prize winners of $34,457 each, for the Take Five drawing for Monday, May 8. Mrs. Pulitano, a retired seamstress, may not be sewing for a while and Mr. Wisotsky, a retired NYPD officer, plans to pay some bills and invest the rest. Hey, you gotta be in it to win it!

Following upon his much acclaimed 1996 LongHouse exhibit, Crystal Gardens, more than 400 pieces, grouped into seven installations of Dale Chihuly's recent work will be displayed in the gardens of LongHouse Reserve. work the artists supplied.

I ran into a friend I hadn't seen in twenty years at the Maidstone Arms. He had his wife with him. I had only heard her name previously and I'm happy to have a face for the name now. I look forward to getting to know him again and including her in the fun. This is a small town but it is still possible not to run into your old friends. Ed Hannibal who was my high school English teacher at the Hampton Day School came to our opening on Saturday. I hadn't seen him in more than twenty years. I always adored him. We had a good laugh over the fact that I write on demand these days.

I wouldn't have believed it possible. He was kind. We both agreed that I'm lucky that computers come with spell check. He is a novelist. Reading his books inspired me when I was still in school.

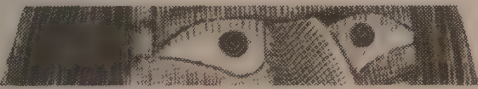

There was a clothes trade in Sag Harbor on Sunday afternoon. I'm told over a hundred women were invited. I had to work but I'm sure it was great fun. The trades are not about money. It is all about fun. Everyone I know has clothing that they don't wear. This is a way to recycle and get something for nothing. If you would like to start your own trade. It's a great formula for a party. I was sorry to miss it.

Even weekdays can be over full. Tapp Francke has a show of her photographs up at the Ursus gallery in Manhattan. Although I'm showing Tapp's work later in the season, I would have liked to get to her opening on Tuesday. It was simply impossible. I'll have to live vicariously through her mother.

I hope I don't exhaust everyone with all of this. I'm also sure I missed more than half of what was going on. I know I missed a talk at Guild Hall on Sunday. It was organized by EEGO (East End Gay Organization). I hear it was wonderful.

—Kimberly Goff

for the coveted championship ring against the Los Angeles Lakers. The games are played with several days interval between them so that there could be lots of hype and discussion about the proceedings and prospects. Indiana won the first game and Indiana won the second game. Toward the end of the second game, with the Knicks far behind, Ewing twisted his ankle badly and would miss the next and possibly even the second game after that. It seemed almost hopeless for our team. But the Knicks, without Ewing played a fast break, non-stop, offensive game that kept them nipping at Indiana's heels until the very end, when they won by one point. Two days later, they repeated the performance. Now the Knicks and Indiana were dead even and Patrick Ewing, his ankle healed, was ready to come back. It's embarrassing to say this but at that time there was much said about the idea of not letting Ewing play. But in the end, since he's their biggest man, their star and their high scorer, Van Gundy put him back into the starting line-up.

The Knicks then lost game five. Afterwards, VanGundy made some adjustments, none of which included taking Ewing out of the lineup, and starting in game six, they went out to a seventeen point lead in the first quarter, only to collapse and have Indiana win going away.

And there it was, that picture again, of Ewing on the back cover of the New York Post, that hang dog sad look on his face that he does so well, walking off the court to the locker room, another year down the tubes.

Ewing will be thirty seven next year. I think it's time that we give him a great farewell retirement party, with appropriate speeches for all he has done for New York. On the other hand, if he says he feels in great health, and thinks he can perform next year just as well as ever, and I mean no disrespect to Mr. Ewing when I say this, perhaps we ought to take him out back and shoot him.

hours under the boys' insistence the woman agreed that she and an intern would accompany the boys to the bus loading area to arrive there by 5:30 where the boys would be handed over to their teachers.

They left the building and began to walk through the park. The boys asked if they could have their twenty dollar bill back and they were told no and they asked if they could have a refund of their tickets and they were told no. They pointed out they had had nothing to eat or drink since one o'clock and the woman relented. She took them to a funnel cake stand where, with their own money, they bought what they needed. They devoured their food like wild animals. They were famished.

At the bus, the boys were officially transferred to the custody of the teachers, the woman requiring that an under 18 release form be signed by a chaperone.

Everyone went home and the story of this trip has been making the rounds of this community since. The high school has told one mother that they will file a complaint with Six Flags general manager Bill Muirhead. It seems apparent that the park has in this case exhibited amazing stupidity, poor employee training and judgement and, since the teachers say they never heard anything, an inadequate paging system. Certainly the boys were held for an excessive period of time.

As for the physics report – which they had explained to the lady and even shown the forms – they were graded as incomplete. •

HEADLINE NEWS

Payne Guilty in Shelter Island Murder

On June 2 in Riverhead, Kenneth Payne II was found guilty of second degree murder in the slaying of a longtime friend, Curtis Cook. The incident occurred in April, 1998. Payne admitted to shooting Cook. At the time of the murder Cook was out on bail after being charged with sexually molesting a young girl. Payne claimed Cook had threatened him, his girlfriend and his daughter.

Payne had gone for all or nothing, not allowing his attorney to present a defense that would have allowed the jury to convict him of a lesser charge. The jury, of eight men and four women, did rule that the killing was not intentional, but came about because of Payne reckless behavior and his depraved indifference to human life.

This was the first recorded murder in the 350 year history of Shelter Island. Payne will be sentenced by Acting Suffolk County Court Judge John Mullen on June 30. Payne faces a maximum sentence of twenty-five years.

Payne's attorney, Steven Wilutis, said an appeal is likely.

Regina Maris Sinks

When the venerable ship the Regina Maris was moved from Greenport because the town decided it could not maintain its upkeep and insurance, the vessel found a home in Glen Cove. But that town is finding the ship has its problems. Recently it partly sunk in Glen Cove Creek; some of the old boards were too far apart—but the Save the Regina Maris Foundation has plans to put a plastic liner on the ship's bottom to keep it above the waters.

A Thank You Party From Dan

This party makes the first of a triple crown summer celebrating Dan's Papers 40th Anniversary. Dear clients and friends toasted Dan at the beautiful Wolffer Estate late Saturday afternoon. Music was provided by Bonnie Sanders and it was a lovely occasion. Can't wait until the next celebration, June 10 Pony Awards to be followed by an all blow out rock and Roll party in July. Congratulations Dan.

"Annual Fundraiser at Elaine Benson Gallery"

The Group for the South Fork and the Nature Conservancy joined efforts once again for their annual fundraiser at the Elaine Benson Gallery this past Friday. The speaker was Ken Robbins whose photography reflects our ever changing landscape. We have less and less open space to protect. Nancy Kelly spoke on behalf of the Nature Conservancy and Bob Deluca spoke representing the group for the South Fork. Special thanks to Hillary Loucheim for organizing the event.

"Opening Day At Citarella"

Just when you thought you had everything in the Hamptons, Citarella's Market opens their doors in the Citarella Plaza in Water Mill. Sunday, May 28, was the grand opening for this upscale, downhome market, just in time for the Memorial Day weekend with an incredible turnout to celebrate the occasion. Now the Hampton's really does have it all!

Tony Awards 2000

Michael Blakemore made theatre history by winning Tony Awards for Best Director of both a play and a musical at the 54 annual Tony Awards hosted by Rosie O'Donnell and held Sunday at Radio City Music Hall. The British director was honored for the musical revival of Cole Porter's Kiss Me Kate, which also won as best Revival of a Musical, and Michael Frayn's play Copenhagen, which also won as Best New Play. Both plays were multiple winners as was Susan Stroman's ground breaking musical Contact, which was honored as best musical amid controversy as to its status as musical. The Real Thing, another multiple winner, won as Best Revival of a Play along with acting awards for its stars, Stephen Dillane and Jennifer Ehle. The Highlight of the evening was Dame Edna Everage, who presented Martin Pakledinaz with the Tony Award for best costume design. Dame Edna planted two kisses on him and Martin could hardly keep a straight face during his acceptance speech with the two big lipstick marks on his face. Nathan Lane, the show's special guest, was also quite funny in his assist of Rosie O'Donnell.

Star Spangled Summer 2000

One of the kickoff events of the season is the Southampton Hospital Benefit in Quogue. This year, the event was held on the grounds of the Cushing mansion. Guests had to walk through the home to get to the reception, and got a glimpse at the cushy Cushing digs. It had an elegance of decades past, before there was such a thing as a dotcom or a NASDAQ. The guests had 90 minutes to cocktail and then went into dinner which was catered by Starr Boggs. After the first two courses of food and music, the auction began and the acoustics were not friendly to Sheldon Tannon and his fellow auctioneer. However, the various vacation packages got some healthy bidding, all for a good cause.

Cocktails With Petrycki

The weather was cool and the music was hot at the cocktail party given by Jane and Mike Petrycki for a hundred of their closest friends at their Southampton home. The party took place outside and despite the chill the women were out in a season of bright colors. Later on in the evening, guests retreated indoors to continue the party, well beyond the time it was supposed to end, probably causing quite a headache for the caterer.

Sex And The City

Maybe it's the name of the show - maybe it's the sexy women who star - maybe it's that many women from Southampton to Sacramento associate with the trials and tribulations of the characters. Whatever the reason - HBO's Sex And the City is the hit of the season even before it airs. The party for the first episodes at UA Theatres on E 63 in New York was jammed packed but that was nothing compared to post-screening party at Guastavinos. The wait outside was reminiscent of the door in the old days of Studio 54.

Long Island National Golf Course Celebrates Its Grand Opening

When the Gatz family bought land in the Northville area of Riverhead township back in 1954, they never dreamed that their peaceful potato fields would one day be transformed into what promises to be one of the premier golfing venues on Long Island and even beyond.

Bill Gatz is a Managing Partner of Peconic Golf which owns Long Island National Golf Course, the highly acclaimed layout on Sound Avenue. "Our family decided that we wanted to keep this land open so we agreed in 1995 to go ahead with my idea of building a golf course here. In June of '97 we started the design planning and in October '97 we started to move dirt. The course was grassed in August '98 and the first golf was played here in July of last year. I think that all of us in the family are still slightly bemused, after all, we are potato farmers by background but we are delighted that everything has turned out so beautifully. It really is a dream come true."

The challenging course was designed by the world renowned golf course architect, Robert Trent Jones Jr. "When I first saw the fields the image of Ireland came to my mind. Here were the potato fields and now I was going to bring in the golf," he told me with an engaging smile. Despite having built just over 200 golf courses in five continents and in such unlikely places as Moscow and Shanghai, Bob Jones still has a love for challenges and a belief that a golf course should follow a rhythm set as a composer creates a symphony. "I do not subscribe to the concept of signature hole," he went on. "The objective should be to build a signature golf course and I believe that we have achieved this here. Coming to Long Island was very special for me. I was born and raised in the East and this gave me a feeling of coming home. My father designed the great Montauk Downs course and my brother, Rees Jones built the challenging Atlantic course so in this area people can see the different styles we use in our work. This course presented its own challenges. Some sites call for a minimum of architecture to transform them into a golf course whereas others, such as here, demand a very high degree of architectural input.

Long Island National golf course shows how flat farming land can be changed into rolling dunes. The course has points which are up to 10 feet below the grade level and peaks which rise 30 to 40 feet above the original levels. The result is a heathland type course which, because the layout is relatively compact, can be walked and enjoyed. This course is demanding but all the holes can be conquered. To be successful demands properly executed shot making. The first five holes are dominated by tall fescue grasses, then there is a stretch of holes from six onwards where the quiet copse of trees will take away the heat of the summer sun. From there we come to the lake district with two holes at 12 and 13 which are great back to back par 4s," Bob Jones explained. "Then, after the long par-3 14th hole you get ready for the very strong finish from 16 to 18, which provides a true test of players' skills and strengths. I am very happy with our creation here. I believe that golfers will find it an exciting course to play and one where good shot making is rewarded. Golfers will be anxious to reach the next tee to see what that holds for them. The golf experience here will never be dull. The course never plays the same any two days running because of the fluctuating winds and the ever changing weather patterns here on eastern Long Island. This is a real golf course for all types of players. I hope that players will look at the way we have made greens the natural extension of the fairways and how the random bunkering leads to intricate second shots. Using my musical analogy, I see the course as having a Tchaikovsky beginning, followed by a passage of Debussy in the lake district and then a strong Beethoven finish.

Other players may like to match their own composers to the feel and experience they get while playing here!

May 23rd saw the Grand Opening celebrations at Long Island National when several hundred people gathered to see the facilities and to play the course. When Bob Jones talked about bringing Ireland to Long Island, he probably didn't intend to bring along to the Grand Opening a typically 'soft' Irish day with lowering clouds and the ever present hint of rain which turned into reality towards the end of the round. Still, as he told me after the round, "This truly is an all weather course which will be enjoyable to play even when the weather is like today". This is true, for the course has its own character under these gray skies, though most visitors will naturally hope for sunshine.

Steven Dietz is the General Manager and Director of Golf at Long Island National and he gave me his concept of what the club has to offer. "We are proud that we have a club which offers the best facilities that any private club can offer and this is available to everyone because you don't have to be a member to play here. The course, as Bob Jones has told you and you have experienced for yourself, is undeniably going to be a great course and the variation that Bob has built in so that there is the blending of dunes, tree lined areas and water has produced a very special result. The course is demanding but we have a series of 4 tee boxes and these, deliberately are not gender specific. We recommend that golfers study the course book, which all players receive as part of their playing package and choose the tee which best matches their game. There has been comment that our rates are high but I would point out that for their fee players receive the use of a cart plus the course yardage book and also they have unlimited use of the driving range and putting practice areas both before and after their round. Also there are reduced rates for off peak hours. For example, you can play a twilight round on Tuesday to Thursday for $55 or an afternoon round between 2 p.m. and twilight for $75. Visitors have the full use of all the clubhouse facilities, including locker rooms and we operate a bag drop on arrival comparable to the best private clubs. Whether you come here as part of a corporate outing or as individual players, all of our staff are strictly charged that they must do everything possible to ensure that when you leave us you leave as a happy customer. All of the staff are empowered to resolve any problem which may arise. They don't have to funnel everything back to me. As I preciously said, customers must go away happy or we have failed in our jobs."

Having played the course and seen the facilities at Long Island National, there seems little doubt that this will fill a much needed void, by bringing most of the attributes of a private golf club to many who, for one reason or another, have not been able to obtain such a membership. Whether you are a serious low handicapper or someone struggling to break 100, Long Island National golf course, designed by the legendary Robert Trent Jones Jr., should be high on your list of courses to play. Based on my experience, once you have played it you will want to revisit as soon as possible to try to improve your appreciation and understanding just as one revisits a favorite symphony to enhance the appreciation of a masterpiece.

Barcelona, Spain: An Architectural Gem

Often times a traditional cruise throughout Europe provided travelers with a sampling of cities. Even though the itinerary usually only permits a one day visit, many travelers say it gives them a sense of which cities they would like to revisit.

I remembered visiting Barcelona, Spain several years ago. It was a port-of-call from our cruise ship but I remembered this beautiful city and looked forward to my second visit. In September, I had an opportunity to truly explore Barcelona and I was thrilled to find that my initial perceptions were correct -- it is a fabulous European city.

The Olympic games of 1992 brought world attention to Barcelona, a city which got its name from the Romans in the first century before Christ. During the ninth century the city was surrounded by a solid wall, parts of which still exist today. Within the walled section some of the streets still follow the route of the main ways of the old Roman Barcino.

At the end of the tenth century, the Counts of Barcelona broke the chains of serfdom that tied them to the French, and governed their domain as independent kings. It was in this period that Romanesque art developed, and reached a level of great splendor in Catalonia. The Monastery of Saint Pau del Camp stands in Barcelona as a good example today.

The old quarter of Barcelona contains numerous architectural gems that begin in the Roman period and find their maximum splendor in the Medieval Gothic period. The most magnificent is La Cathedral, Pladel la Seu. Construction began in 1298, over the remains of an old Romanesque church of 1058, and still continues today. The best example of Barcelona Gothic architecture can be seen at the church of Santa Maria Del Mar. The great height of its naves makes the inside of this church impressive.

Without a doubt, however, the architecture which most fascinates our travel groups was that of Antonio Gaudi. This man became the most important figure in Catalan modernism, a movement more or less related to Modern Style of Art Nouveau, but with its own very special style. During the late 1800's and early 1900's Gaudi designed buildings throughout Barcelona. In fact, most of his works can be seen in the city of Barcelona. Although his work was not totally accepted until Europe entered its second post-war period, Gaudi's artistic movement converted Barcelona into one of the world capitals of architecture.

When I first saw the buildings designed by Antonio Gaudi, all I could think of was that it appeared as though a building, made of chocolate, had been left in the sun to the point where it began to melt and droop. There is almost a whimsical nature to the facades. Gaudi used iron balconies, curving tribunes, and richly colored mosaic chimneys to create spectacular private homes, schools and cathedrals. He was working on The Temple of the Sagrada Familia (Barcelona's famous cathedral) at the time of his accidental death. Unfortunately, he was run over by a tram and the cathedral is still under construction today. It has become a monumental symbol of Barcelona.

There is an iron fountain in the city center which holds the old traditional saying, "whoever drinks from its waters will be captivated by the charm of Barcelona and will feel the urge to return to the city however far away their place of origin." Without a sip of water we were all captivated by this stunningly beautiful city in Spain. And will definitely return.

Shop'til You Drop.....With Maria Tennariello

With the summer season well on its way, and the Mountain Laurel almost in full bloom, I am a happy shopper. Driving from my home in Noyac to Sag Harbor this week, I couldn't help but notice and enjoy the opening of the Mountain Laurel along the back roads. What a way to start the day!

Starting out in Sag Harbor I stopped to check out a brand new shop on Main Street. Devonian consists of a variety of unique and eclectic home furnishings and works by local artists. Some of the items include, hand crafted furniture made from old barn wood, rugs, hand made pillows, silk screen on canvas, fish sculptures and more. I found very interesting hand-made antique signs and paintings of fish (by astrological sign), as well as lighthouses on stressed wood that are also available to be custom ordered. The owners, Donna and Kimberly, will be happy to assist you. Call for information 725-1398.

Headley Studio of Sag Harbor will be modeled by ten local women of all ages and sizes. Each model will be previewing three new fashions, a total of thirty styles of clothing for career attire, casual wear, resort fashion and evening dress will be shown. The clothing collection at Headley Studio specializes in generous sizes and standard sizes as well. Mark your calendar for Saturday, June 10. There is a luncheon that includes three courses and the fashion show. For tix call 725-194 or 725-3424.

Off to East Hampton to check out another new shop that has just opened. New York designer Christopher Totman has opened his second store on Newtown Lane in East Hampton. The East Hampton shop will carry both the men's and women's collections and as always, features exclusively developed textiles from around the world, in rich colors offering whimsical, wearable designs. His collection is an amalgamation of international aesthetics, using a colorful palette inspired by regular travel and years of living abroad. The stores' richly conceived interior includes maple tree trunks from Christopher's farm in the Berkshires, supporting hand-planed wooden shelves and tables. His gold leaf "paining" provides a stunning, natural backdrop for the spectral palette of his clothing. Crocheted pillows and beach totes, stitched sandals and unique accessories accentuate the store's international atmosphere.

Now how could I pass up A Little of What You Fancy on Newtown Lane in East Hampton? Every time I enter this shop, Paul Leavitt is re-inventing himself. You will find many refreshing and truly eye popping new items like, gems, gifts, fragrances, soaps, candles and candle holders, his T-shirts with cute one line sayings and his infamous pillows that are embroidered in gold thread on a cushion cover that is washable for only $29.95. These pillows have been with this store for over thirty years now, with new titles added each year. Where does he get the new titles from? His customers, of course. The entire store is a panorama of what is new, exciting and exclusive for this summer season. Keeping up with Paul's long standing policy, they offer price levels that appeal to all true shoppers. This is a one stop shop, with more personality and charisma that you can ever, imagine. Stop in and say hi to Paul, tell him Maria sent you.

Jimmy's has finally come to the Hamptons again! After five years in Westhampton, a fourth location has opened in East Hampton too. This boutique showcases some of the world's best designers for women and men including Fendi, Ungaro, Roberto Cavalli, and Marc Jacobs. If you are searching for the perfect cocktail dress, a glamorous evening gown, or chic and casual daywear, Jimmy's is the store to shop 'til you drop!

Happy days at Saks Fifth Avenue on Main Street in Southampton. Selections throughout the store including an extraordinary collection of women's designer ready-to-wear and sportswear fashions at 40% off. Now is the time to stock up on all new fashions for the new season. Fill up that closet! This is a great sale.

Heading back home, I can't wait to put my feet up, rest and recoup. Oh well, I can chart my course for next week's shopping.

Until Next Week. Ciao and Happy Shopping!

Jewelry, An Important Fashion Accessory, Makes A Statement

When we think of fashion, we think clothing, shoes, bags and accessories. I know that jewelry falls in the category of accessories, but really, jewelry should be in a class by itself. There are spring/summer fine jewelry trends that we should be aware of so that we look our very best and are right in line with all other fashion.

Everything's coming up roses and daisies, lilies, peonies and sunflowers, as blossoms take over nature's news in jewelry from the ubiquitous butterfly. When fashion returns to looks of romance and glamour, florals are a natural, and this spring/summer is no exception. "Reflecting the profusion of floral prints in ready-to-wear, fine jewelry blooms in broaches, earrings, garland necklaces and daisy chains set with multicolored gemstones," says Elizabeth Florence, spokesperson for the Jewelry Information Center.

Let's start off with "The Blues." This spring/summer, jewelry in the hues of the sky and sea are the big news. A wide variety of blue gemstones such as tanzanite, azure topaz, lapis lazuli, aquamarine, turquoise, blue tourmaline, sapphire and chalcedony bring oceanic sparkle and complement apparel in clean, cool white and "millennium blue."

Color Explosion: hot pinks and oranges brought a jolt of feminine fun to the spring runways, so expect the complementing gemstones to be seen flashing on fashionable fingers, wrists, ears and necks. Look for fiery citrine, coral, carnelian, amber, Mexican opal, pink sapphire, pink tourmaline, rubellite, pink spinel, rose quartz and garnet to get things glowing. Another fresh color combination is yellow/emerald/lime. Complementing "citrus" jewels include yellow sapphire, jade, tsavorite, emerald, green tourmaline, citrine and peridot.

Bohemian Rhapsody: the fringes, floral embroidery, and fantasy in the peasant/hobo and hippie/gypsy looks would not be complete without gypsy style earrings (both oversized thin karat gold hoops and beaded drops) and multiple skinny bangles in precious metals, often embellished with diamonds or colored gemstone. Dangly earrings ranging from delicate drops to dramatic "shoulder dusters" will dance in the light and even rings will have motion, with dynamic details like fringe and tiny gold or silver bells. For the truly carefree, barefoot or sandal looks are a natural showcase for ankle bracelets and toe rings.

Cyber Chic: Sleek lines, clean, geometric shapes and wirework rule the high tech look, as icy white metals such as platinum, stainless steel, titanium, sterling silver and white gold continue their popularity, though a "warming trend" and a return to yellow gold is surely on the not to distant horizon.

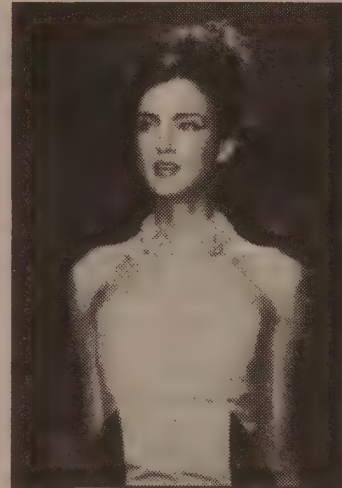

Pearl Girl: Exotic South Sea pearls continue to generate interest, especially in necklaces and drop earrings mixed with diamond pave. Chinese freshwater pearls are growing in popularity, offering the luster of cultured pearls at affordable prices. Modern advances in color enhancement expand options beyond the classic pearly white to include sweet and delicate peaches, pinks, beiges, blues and greens as well as grays with iridescent lustre. The freshest and most modern twist on pearl looks are coming from designers who mix pearls with non-traditional materials such as enamel, beads of coral, Tibetan turquoise, moonstone and labradorite.

Hands: Three quarter length sleeves continue to be important into spring/summer, placing emphasis on the hands, wrists and forearms. Consequently, expect cuffs, both basic and with a twist, and multiple stacking bangles to flourish in popularity. In addition, rings continue to be very important. Often worn on the right hand, much of the aforementioned color is concentrated in either faceted or cabochon gemstones in large cocktail settings.

So, when you're shopping for a special outfit for that special occasion, don't forget the most important accessory, your jewelry. After all, jewelry, in all sizes, shapes, forms and colors, are truly a gals best friend.

Spring/Summer Jewelry Fashions

The Eyes Have It

What the eyes have, more and more, is protection with style.

Both can be found in a recently reintroduced sunglass collection from Carrera, a company recognized around the world for its high performance sport goggles and helmets.

The multifaceted 50-piece Carrera sunwear collection, in both metal and plastic frames, is divided into three categories:

- Classic styles include both sophisticated and traditional looks.
- Sportlife casual styles are designed to be edgy and sport-inspired.
- Sport-tech sunglasses are high performance extreme sport shields featuring polycarbonate lenses and coordinating optical clip-ons in addition to other high-tech features.

As for the part about protection, all these Carrera styles, except the shields, feature the exclusive, state-of-the-art crystal sunglass lens technology known as Spectrum NM 589.

These lenses, made exclusively for Carrera, offer six features that make them particularly appropriate for people who do a lot of driving, water-sports and other outdoor activities in which sunlight and glare are factors.

1. An exclusive color-enhancing technology that increases overall color contrast and specifically heightens perception of red, green yellow and blue.
  2. Anti-reflective coating on the internal surface of the lens reduces the reflection of light coming from behind and sides of the frame. Micro-thin layers of metal oxides absorb light and block reflections before they reach the eye.
  3. Polarized glare reduction filters out reflected glare, allowing the wearer to see more detail with less strain. The polarization is not the effect of a laminate, as with most sunglasses, but is actually encapsulated in the glass. The result is a high-performance lens that protects against all reflective surfaces.
  4. Clearseal Water Resistance coating repels water, dust and oils, the coating forms an ultra-smooth protective layer. Water and snow roll right off the lens, improving the quality of vision for all wet weather conditions and water sports. Fingerprints and stains wipe easily away.
  5. Shatter-resistance, impact resistance and scratch-resistance features provide added durability.

SCULPTURE AT THE LONGHOUSE

There are many hidden pleasures in the Hamptons, and one of them has surely got to be the sculpture garden at the LongHouse, Jack Larsen's multi-acre home situated on Hands Creek Road. Just as the site is hidden from the roadway, so are the sculptures which are scattered around the property; a visitor feels like Christopher Columbus on an Easter Egg hunt trying to find the various pieces. The tendency is to get off track as other objects come into view: a small lake here, a flower bed there, even an amphitheater.

But that's part of the experience evoked by this special garden. Just when we give up hope of locating the newest piece, we round a bend, and there it is. What's also unique is the surprise at not only finally finding a work, but also at discovering the diverse styles present.

Not all the sculpture seems indigenous to the setting, however. For example, Alphonso Ossorio's totem-like piece complete with an eagle on top is not simply a surreal piece; the juxtaposition with its serene surroundings also signifies distortion. Moreover, Buckminster Fuller's fiberglass, "Fly's Eye Dome," resembles a holdover from

The most recent sculpture additions, although still stylistically varied, seem more connected to the natural habitat inspired by the distant past. Pavel Opocensky's blue granite shapes are a case in point, recalling ancient monoliths. Ron Rudnicki's natural stone pieces form a symbiotic relationship with the ground beneath them. Artist Rudnicki's sensitivity to the land is apparent here as it is also present in his love of the Inca Valley where he has spent many an hour studying the ancient configurations.

Lynda Benglis' abstract "Migrating Redmarks" recalls antiquity as well, her sculpture looking like an animal which may have roamed the earth several million years ago. It blends in perfectly with the surrounding trees, its appendages almost an extension of the foliage.

The LongHouse's garden is open to the public only on certain days of the week. Call for information at 329-3568.

Lynda Benglis' "Migrating Redmarks"

the World's Fair, but there it stands, nonetheless, in all its glory.

HONORING THE ARTIST: DEREK BUCKNER

Derek Buckner seems to be an artist who likes to push things beyond their normal capacities — to make objects more dramatic than they actually appear in real life. Consider, for example, his use of color, where he paints skies that are darker and thus more dramatic than when he observes them directly. Or Shelter Island's old houses with porches where he emphasizes light playing on the white facades, thus evoking a similar dramatic quality.

This love of bucolic settings is a far cry from Mr. Buckner's other paintings which are inspired by his living in New York.

"I go down to the harbor in Brooklyn where I live and paint the Red Hook area, an area where a lot of artists live," he says. "I like to paint the harbor, the boats, the skyline, but especially the old warehouses there. Sometimes I paint a view of Brooklyn and the old factories from the East 30s in Manhattan."

Despite the differences in ambience between Shelter Island and Brooklyn, Mr. Buckner's works share some commonalities: a somewhat abstract style and a love of space/color. But it is Brooklyn that has a hold on Mr. Buckner's heart. "I grew up in Brooklyn," he explains. "It has a lot of character, but like the movies, Smoke and Blue in the Face, it is changing. For example, there are more nice restaurants now."

Mr. Buckner hasn't lived his entire life in Brooklyn, however. He spent over two years studying the classics at Vassar and then transferred to the Art Institute of Chicago where he majored in painting. After graduation, Mr. Buckner moved to Baja, California.

"I lived in a town that reminded me of the TV show Northern Exposure," he recalls. "It was a good place to paint, but I decided to develop my career on the East Coast; I came back to New York five years ago and started showing in New York galleries."

Perhaps it was the Baja environment that influenced Mr. Buckner's affinity for the dramatic, or perhaps it was the fact that his father is an artist. "My father encouraged me from the very beginning," says Mr. Buckner. Attending the La Guardia School of Music, Art, and the Performing Arts and exposure to sculpture was another factor which surely impacted on the young artist.

There have been specific artists and works which have influenced Mr. Buckner as well, including Paul Resika's figures on the beach, and Winslow Homer. When asked if New York's art community also influences him, Mr. Buckner responds: "I go through phases of isolating myself and then going to look at a lot of exhibits and museums, so sometimes I am influenced by the art scene."

Either way, Mr. Buckner maintains a consistency when he says why he is attracted to painting: "I love the immediacy and independence that it allows me. To see something go from nothing to something in a short period of time."

—Marion Wolberg Weiss

Take Five 2000 with Jan Silver

This weekend Guild Hall, East Hampton, and the Parrish Art Museum, Southampton, are the sites of special events. Senior dancers from the Joffrey Ballet school will perform at Guild Hall on Friday and Saturday evenings, and well-known novelist Howard Fast will talk Sunday in the "Writers at Guild Hall" series. The Parrish opens its much-anticipated New York art of the 1950s/1960s exhibition with a panel of celebrated friends speaking about poet/art critic Frank O'Hara on Saturday. Pedro Almodovar's recent critically-acclaimed film All About My Mother will be at the Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center this weekend. Author Alice McDermott, winner of the 1998 National Book Award for Charming Billy, will speak at the Bridgehampton Library on Tuesday, June 13.

The benefit season is in full bloom this weekend. There's a cocktail party for the Child Development Center of the Hamptons at Peconic Coast Restaurant this Thursday, June 8 (call 267-2734). On Saturday, the New York-to-the-Hamptons Challenge 2000 Bicycle Marathon goes from South Street Seaport to Southampton College. Planned Parenthood holds its big annual cocktail party at the Chiat/vonGal home in Sagaponack on Saturday. And Dan Rattiner of Dan's Papers will receive the first Pride of New York Award at Minden, Louise and Leonard Riggio's Bridgehampton estate, at a big party for the Maryhaven Center of Hope in Port Jefferson.

There is also theater and music around, so read on for details:

THEATER

This is the last weekend to experience a scary evening of theater at Sag Harbor's Bay Street Theatre. The hit London ghost play The Woman In Black plays through Sunday. To reserve seats, call the box office at (631) 725-9500 or visit the website at www.baystreet.org.

DANCE

The noted modern ballet company founded by Robert

Joffrey may have relocated its headquarters to Chicago, but its ballet school has affiliated with The New School University and its senior dancers will be at Guild Hall, East Hampton, on Friday and Saturday to perform "Copland and Dance," a tribute to American composer Aaron Copland. This is a chance to see accomplished dancers at the beginning of their careers performing excerpts from classic Copland ballet scores such as Rodeo and Billy the Kid. Performances are at 8 p.m. both evenings; call the Guild Hall box office at (631) 324-4050 for tickets ($18 and $20).

FILM

Spanish filmmaker Pedro Almodovar's most recent film, All About My Mother, will be screened at the Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center this Friday and Saturday at 8:30 p.m. and Sunday afternoon. Tickets are available at the door, or call WHBPAC at (631) 288-1500.

MUSIC

The Radiators will perform both Friday and Saturday at Amagansett's Stephen Talkhouse (631-267-3117) and the Mike LeDonne Quintet is the Sunday evening attraction at the WPBX-FM "Jazz at the Wild Rose Cafe" series in Bridgehampton. There are two shows at The Rose (7:45 and 10 p.m.); call (631) 537-5050 for tickets ($25).

Dionne Warwick will be at the Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center for three performances—Friday and Saturday, June 23 and 24. Call the WHBPAC box office at (631) 288-1500 for tickets before they sell out.

SPEAKERS

Artist Jane Freilicher, writer Joseph LeSueur, and poet Bill Berkson will reminisce about their friend, poet Frank O'Hara, and his influence on the New York art world of the 1950s/1960s on Saturday, 5 p.m., at the Parrish Art Museum, Southampton. The program continues at 7 p.m. the same evening when poet Kenneth Koch reads a selection of O'Hara's poems directly related to the art of those years. Both programs are part of the new exhibition "In Memory of My Feelings: Frank O'Hara and American Art." There will be refreshments and music at this opening celebration. There is no charge for Museum members and $5 for guests, but please let the Museum know if you will be coming (631-283-2118).

Novelist Howard Fast, author of Spartacus, Citizen Tom Paine and more than 40 other tomes, will read from his new thriller, Greenwich, at Guild Hall, East Hampton, on Sunday at 2 p.m. Tickets to the "Writers at Guild Hall" series are at the door.

Author Stephan Kanfer will be Upstairs at Book Hampton, East Hampton, at 5:30 p.m. on Saturday to speak about his new book Groucho: The Life and Times of Julius Henry Marx. Psychic Donna McCue will be at Book Hampton, Sag Harbor, on Saturday at 5:30 with her book Your Fate is in Your Hand. There are also readings at Canio's Books, Sag Harbor, on Saturday.

A taste of the Hampton Library's popular "Fridays at Five" famous writers' chats will be on Tuesday, June 13, in the garden behind the Bridgehampton Main St. Library. National Book Award winner Alice McDermott will read from her work and take questions from the audience at 3 p.m. Admission is a $10 donation to the library, and light refreshments will be served. Rain site is the St. Ann's Parish House across the street. For more information, call the library at (631) 537-0015.

BENEFITS AND SPECIAL EVENTS

A 100-mile bicycle marathon to raise awareness about hate crimes and AIDS goes on Saturday from Manhattan's South Street Seaport to Southampton College. Called the "New York to the Hamptons Challenge 2000," it will raise funds for the Long Island Association for AIDS

THIS MOVIE WILL SELF DESTRUCT IN FIVE SECONDS

There are swaggering, bragging types like this fella, Tom Cruise as Ethan Hunt, who unashamedly may say, "We do the difficult. The impossible takes a little longer." I have to tell ya! Mission: Impossible 2, took too-2, too long...as far as I'm concerned. Too-2, two hours of the "impossible", got to be a bit impossible. Just a bit too much #2 sequel. Sure, the beautiful, breathtaking visual stylizations of the fabulous Hong Kong director, John Woo, sweeps you along at break-neck speed and enthralls you repeatedly with his "how-the-heck-did-they-do-it" stunts and most of them (especially in the first two thirds of the movie) very varied and original. But, the final third, the denouement (excuse my French), explodes like those long strings of Chinese firecrackers...pop after pop of the usual: Ethan skittering across floors (like a quarter skimming across a pond) firing hundreds of bullets, tons of glass shattering, great-balls-of-fire fireballs, zooming motorcycles and autos, smoke and mirrors etc. etc. And, you know that the hero will singlehandedly save the girl, the day and the entire world, this time from an extremely deadly biological virus. (Whew! Let's take a breath.) Of course, all this is done with the tang and Yin and Yang of Mr. Woos marvelous Hong Kong specialties but, as we all know... that delicious stuff doesn't stay with you that long.

Mission Impossible 2

TO DREAM THE IMPOSSIBLE DREAM

Mr. Cruise is definitely the Yang in M:I-2. An over-active, masculine cosmic force, he is interfaced with Thandie Newton as Nyah Hall... decidedly Yin... feminine, cosmic and principled, moon-like and with a shady past. She's a wily jewel thief who is recruited by the M:I force (that deals with messy tasks) to keep the villain Dougray Scott as Ambrose, from killing off the population of Sydney, Australia with that awful virus and then blackmailing the rest of the world since he has gotten his terrible, greedy hands on the curative vaccine. (Hm-m-m, sounds kind of like a James Bond... doesn't it?) Well, it is. As I remember, Mission: Impossible, the TV concept by Bruce Geller, was a diverse team. Now Ethan/Cruise works solo. Oh, yeah... he has Ving Rhames and John Polson around from time to time, but they are mostly there to compute or chauffeur Tom as he cruises from picturesque places like Andalusia and Utah accurately sought out digitally, and with high, high tech, satellite guidance.

ONE ALONE TO CALL HIS OWN

Don't expect Sir Anthony (Hopkins, that is) to do more than give Cruise some marching orders and utter the M:I proviso: "This mission... if you choose to except it... and so on..." That is as definitive as the electronic gadgets, the rip-away latex masks and most enduring and truly exciting! That music by Lalo Schiffrin... it's held up much better than most of the M:I franchise. Mr. Cruise as producer, with Paula Wagner, was right in making this a "solo" outing. He also produced the first M:I and except for a few good stunts was a muddled, mild exercise in old-time, tired theatrics as directed by Brian De Palma. John Woo has given us a tour de force of technical brilliance that makes even Mr. Cruise look like he is performing all those precarious high-wire acts of deft articulateness. It's a shame that his line readings can't be as articulate. It cannot be blamed on the non-script by Robert Towne (yes, of Chinatown). Cruise looks like a hero, is made digitally to act like a hero, but, by heroes...he's no hero. By me, he (unlike Mr. Woo) lacks manly style... except for his hair.

HAMPTONS NIGHTLIFE WITH CHRISTINE CARROLL

Shout out of the week goes to: Donna Bollon, thanks Donna!

I'm sure everyone saw that the lines were much better this weekend, which leads me to the question where in the world was everyone? Casey's was pretty packed on Friday, but we went to Brazil afterwards and it was quite empty. Doesn't anyone want to have fun? Brazil looks amazing by the way. Not at all what Dublin Over looked like.

Saturday we made it to Tavern but paying $30.00 to get into a club where they make you wait outside and let girls in skimpy clothes in first didn't make my friends happy. We then headed over to good old Conscience Point where it was rockin' as usual.

This coming weekend should be good, I think I'll check out NV and see why everyone loves it so much. Have fun and girls watch out for the Roxbury brothers.

silvia lehrer's cooking column

"They're picking strawberries right now", answered Patti Halsey of the Green Thumb Farmers Market in Water Mill. "The first of the season", she continued when asked when we could look forward to our own local strawberries.

Strawberries, shaped like a red heart with the sweetest aroma and flavor, are considered the most perfect of fruits. Their season is short, perhaps only through late June, and their fleeting season is cause for celebration.

Bowls, brimming over with berries, circles of strawberries tossed with a grinding of black pepper, toasted chopped walnuts, and citrus juices, Florentine style, a chilled strawberry rhubarb soup, the ubiquitous strawberry shortcake and even a strawberry daiquiri are just a handful of ways to enjoy this luscious fruit.

So join the band of berry pickers, or pick them up at a farm stand and discover the joys of this alluring fruit. Several farmers markets on the East End are available for berry picking. Check with the Green Thumb at 726 1900 for their availability. Carefully pluck ripe, juicy berries that are uniformly red from top to bottom. Use local berries within a day or so of purchase as perishability is a problem. Keep them cool and dry and do not wash any berries until ready to use.

ISLAND STRAWBERRY DAIQUIRI

An entertaining way to use the strawberries that are swinging into bloom. This recipe works great with flash-frozen fresh strawberries to use all summer long.

Serves 4

3/4 cup firm, ripe strawberries
1/2 cup white rum
1/2 cup cream of coconut
2 teaspoons lemon juice
1-2 teaspoons Grenadine
Crushed ice
Mint sprigs for garnish (optional)

1. Combine strawberries, rum, cream of coconut, lemon juice and grenadine in the workbowl of a food processor fitted with steel knife, or a blender. Process or blend for 5 seconds. Divide the mixture into 4 well-chilled wine glasses, half-filled with crushed ice. Garnish with sprigs of fresh mint, if desired and serve cold.

CHILLED STRAWBERRY RHUBARB SOUP WITH STRAWBERRY FAN GARNISH

A chilled soup in summer can be singularly uplifting.

Serves 10-12

1 1/2 pounds rhubarb
2 pints strawberries (Reserve 1/2 cup for garnish)
2 cups water
1/2 cup sugar
1/3 cup red port wine

1 Wash rhubarb; cut off and discard leaves and bruised ends; pull off strings as well as possible. Cut into 1-inch pieces. Wash and hull berries.

2. In a saucepan, combine rhubarb, 2 cups water and sugar. Bring to edge of a boil over moderately high heat, then reduce heat to a simmer and cook, covered, for about 10 minutes. Pour cooked rhubarb through a strainer over a bowl pressing down hard with the back of a wooden spoon to extract as much liquid as possible. Only the liquid will be used for the soup. (The slightly tart pulp will make a tasty relish to serve with grills and roasts.)

3. Place strawberries in workbowl of food processor or blender and add 1 cup rhubarb liquid. Process or blend until mixture is pureed, scraping down sides with a rubber spatula as necessary. Return mixture to rhubarb liquid, add port wine and stir to mix. Can be made up to several days ahead. Taste to adjust seasoning. Refrigerate, covered.

4. Serve chilled from a mug or a wine glass with a strawberry fan garnish. To make the garnish, rinse berries and leave whole with stems attached. Make long thin cuts on either side of each berry from top to within 1/8 inch of the stem. With thumb and middle finger gently spread each berry, in opposite directions, to fan it.

BAREFOOT CONTESSA'S STRAWBERRY SCONES

Ina Garten's Barefoot Contessa, in East Hampton, is as well-known for the stores fine baked goods as it is for the selective array of specialty foods they offer. While her simple strawberry scones are made with dried strawberries, serve them on a Sunday morning with a bowl full of fresh juicy red berries and plenty of hot café au lait.

Makes 14-16 large scones

4 cups plus 1 tablespoon all-purpose flour
2 tablespoons sugar, plus additional for sprinkling
2 tablespoons baking powder
2 teaspoons salt
3/4 pound cold unsalted butter, diced
4 extra-large eggs, lightly beaten
1 cup cold heavy cream
3/4 cup small-diced dried strawberries
1 egg beaten with 2 tablespoons water or milk, for egg wash

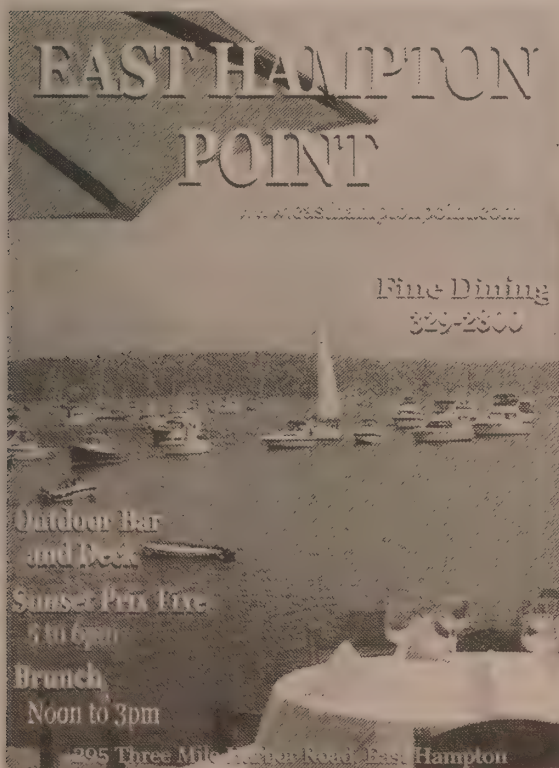

Preheat oven to 400 degrees

1. In the bowl of an electric mixer fitted with paddle attachment, combine 4 cups flour, 2 tablespoons sugar, baking powder and salt. Blend the cold butter at the lowest speed and mix until the butter is in pea-sized pieces. Combine the eggs and heavy cream and quickly add them to the flour and butter mixture. Combine until just blended. Toss the strawberries with 1 tablespoon of flour, add them to the dough and mix quickly. The dough may be a bit sticky.

2. Dump the dough onto a well-floured surface and be sure it is well combined. Flour your hands and a rolling pin and roll the dough 3/4 inch thick. You should see lumps of butter in the dough. Cut the squares with a 4-inch plain or fluted cutter, then cut them diagonally to make triangles. Place on a baking sheet lined with parchment paper.

3. Brush the tops with egg wash. Sprinkle with sugar and bake for 20-25 minutes, until the outsides are crisp and the insides are fully baked.

Dining IN THE HAMPTONS

Cooking With Kids Builds Confidence, Sparks Creativity

The busiest room in your home is a classroom full of opportunities for the entire family. Cooking is an activity that can entertain and educate children, as well as bring out their creativity. It calls for them to follow directions, practice safety and cleanliness, and helps them learn about nutrition.

Spending quality time cooking with the kids builds self-confidence. By finding ingredients and following the recipe to create a dish, the fruits of their labor produces an immediate sense of accomplishment. Of course, eating the result is dually rewarding.

Attracting kids to the kitchen starts with recipes that sound pleasing to their palates. Desserts hit a home run with most kids, and moms like fare with a healthy flare. Amy Thompson, director of consumer affairs and nutritionist at Saco Foods, suggests using recipes that incorporate fresh fruit. "Fruit provides nutritional benefits and its versatility allows it to be used in everything from main courses to sundaes," she says.

Strawberries are her first choice since they can be savored in a dish or served a la carte, "Over 94 percent of all households consume them," she says. "Strawberries are a good source of Vitamin C, folic acid, potassium and fiber, and are being recognized more and more for playing a fundamental role in a healthy diet."

Keeping the activity simple also ensures a fun and well-rounded cooking experience for everyone involved. A family favorite she recommends is dipping fruit in melted chocolate. Don't worry about dragging out candy thermometers and double boilers - easier methods are on the market. Dolci Frutta brand is one product that revolutionized the chocolate melting process. Top-quality chocolate wafers come in a microwaveable container for melting and dipping, eliminating messy clean up.

Remember, children enjoy this so much that they'll want to keep on dipping. Try other fruit like pineapple, bananas and cherries. But don't stop there: pretzels, marshmallows and cookies dipped in chocolate will win them over too.

You'll find the results to be so impressive that you may even recruit the kids to dip food for your next dinner

SIGHTINGS . . .

Director Barry Sonnenfeld and designer Betsey Johnson mixed and mingled while sampling fare from some of the East End's best restaurants at Taste of the Nation held at the Tsunami restaurant? Also spotted at Tsunami recently were artist Ross Bleckner and Calvin Klein... down the road in East Hampton, birthday-girl Brooke Shields and her boyfriend were spotted enjoying an intimate dinner at Della Femina... Gwyneth Paltrow was recently spied chowing at Babette's, an East Hampton favorite for health-conscious celebs... Kelsey Grammer dined with an entourage at Pacific East over Memorial Day weekend... and over at Nick & Toni's during the holiday weekend the likes of Ron Perelman, Ellen Barkin, actress Julianne Moore and Donald Trump were all spied enjoying chef Joe Realmuto's famous fare...

It's Our Garden WITH ELIZABETH AND CROW MILLER

These oil sprays, except neem oil, kill insects by suffocating them. Oil sprays also kill insect eggs by penetrating the shells and interfering with metabolic and respiratory processes. In addition, oil sprays disrupt feeding by insects such as flea beetles, whiteflies, and aphids. The fact that oil sprays kill insects by smothering is a key virtue. Many pesticides kill them by interfering with biochemical processes that are similar to those in other animals, including people. What kills a tiny insect can make us sick. Also, oil sprays have few residual effects, and so their impact on beneficial or benign insects is minimal.

Horticultural oil sprays prevent the spread of viruses by aphids, including watermelon mosaic, squash mosaic, and potato virus Y. Spray oils also curb the speed of viruses that humans transmit by hands or tools. Additionally, spray oils control powdery mildew. Diluted horticulture oils, mixed with baking soda, control this common fungus.

Most beneficial insects, such as green lacewings and ladybugs, scatter before the spray comes and aren't bothered by the residue when they return. However, small, soft-bodied beneficial insects, such as predatory mites, can't move out of the way fast enough and are killed. If you rely on beneficial mites to deter other pests, think twice before using an oil spray. Better still release beneficial mites several days after you treat with the oil spray.

Horticultural oil is the preferred general term for the various oils gardeners use on plants. Most horticultural oils are refined from crude oil. They have several common characteristics but different names. The exceptions are vegetable and neem oils.

Petroleum-based oils contain naphthene and paraffin compounds. Paraffins are valuable to gardeners because they're more toxic to insects and less toxic to plants than some other oil compounds. In contrast, oil sprays containing naphthene are less pesticidal and more likely to injure plants than paraffinic types. Oil sprays high in naphthene also contain more impurities such as phytotoxic aromatic and unsaturated hydrocarbons, however, the newest oil sprays contain only tiny amounts of those compounds. But for organic growers we do not recommend using petroleum-based oil sprays.

Dormant oil is used on woody plants, especially fruit trees, during their dormant seasons. New, refined, lightweight oils have replaced older heavy dormant oil sprays. Today, the name refers to the time and rate of application.

- Mineral oil is a light, petroleum-derived oil gardeners can use to control corn earworm.

- Narrow-range oil is a light oil graded according to the range of temperature over which it evaporates. Lighter oil sprays evaporate over a narrower range of temperatures than other oils, and thus this term is synonymous with superirn or supreme oil. If an oil spray evaporates quickly, as light oils do, plants have a greater margin of safety.

- Spray oil includes soaplike emulsifiers that allow water and oil to mix for spraying.

- Summer oil sprays are used on leafy plants and fruit trees during the growing season. Generally, it's the same as narrow-range, superior and vegetable oils.

- Superior oil describes new, more refined oils that can be applied safely at lower rates to green leaves. Today, all horticultural oil sprays are superior-type oils, and label directions specify varying application rates for use during dormancy or the growing season.

- Neem oil comes from the seeds of the neem tree and is used as both an insecticide and a fungicide. Neem oil is effective at killing insect eggs and immature insects, notably small soft-bodied pests such as whiteflies and aphids. It has been shown that neem oil kills certain mite eggs, too. Neem oil also prevents powdery mildew and black spot. Use it on roses, fruit trees and vegetables.

Neem-derived insecticides contain azadirachtin. It controls whiteflies, aphids, and other soft-bodied insects. Other neem-seed compounds inhibit insect feeding, repel pests, disrupt insect growth and kills fungus.

- Vegetable oil is the term for any oil that's derived from oilseed crops such as soybean, rapeseed, or cottonseed. Soybean oil provides good control. Canola and sunflower oils are less effective, and corn oils shows

EASTEND FARMING WITH JOE GERGELA

One thing about "the Hamptons" that amazes me is the constant political pressure on the various boards to "do something" about the developmental pressure. In the last several weeks, I have received calls from various landowners concerned primarily with two issues; the proposal of the bike path and the master plan update and subsequent Town code amendments. The bike path proposal has been around for a number of years and affects property owners in both Southampton and East Hampton. For farmer landowners, the concern is what the effect will be of any eminent domain proceedings and the impact on individual private property rights.

I do know that the use of eminent domain in a New York State-formed Agricultural District will be a highly contested event. We are trying to preserve agricultural land and agricultural businesses, so any impact on either will be carefully evaluated. There are a number of hoops and hurdles the Towns will have to go through if, in fact, eminent domain is actually necessary to create a bike path. We don't necessarily oppose the idea of a bike path - we just have to make sure it is well-planned with the least measure of impact on private property owners. I find it somewhat hypocritical that the "no development" crowd perpetuating this bike path considers it all right to blacktop a bike path but it's not all right to do so for a driveway or a parking lot. Go figure.

The other significant issue in Southampton is the ongoing drafting of code amendments to implement the master plan update. I attended a committee meeting last week that dealt primarily with the remaining undeveloped farmland and how best to retain as much of it as possible. There are many different land-use planning tools available, such as PDRs, TDRs, clustering, etc. Probably all will be looked at in implementing the preservation strategy. So far, the drafts of code revisions I have seen are pretty good, but one item that large landowners are going to question is a possible policy to restrict development to 20 percent of a parcel. There are going to be some controversial aspects of the code amendments. However, we have a very capable members of the agricultural advisory committee and the code committee who will do their best to balance the issues. From our perspective, we support a voluntary approach to land preservation. We won't allow the remaining farmer landowners to lose their equity - their life savings in their land - because they were the last in the Town. We all have a moral obligation to protect and preserve our natural resources, including farmland, but not at the expense of a few, expected to provide open space for the rest of us. LIFB will be there to ensure a fair and equitable outcome for the good of the Town's citizens.

A Step Ahead In Service

Another day, another mansion. Estate Property Management is on the job again. We are South of the Highway, and this morning consists of numerous calls to the owner overseas to narrow down the right trees for the landscape project plus co-ordinating the new irrigation system. Can't forget the schedule for the owners arrival and arrangements for transportation.

Then it's down the block to check in the carpenter's handmade doors and the arrival of their wine shipment. The cleaning service has been here and gone. The house is spotless and the classic Mercedes is being dropped off from its scheduled servicing. The gardener is installing the new garden and meeting with the landscape architect. Across town, by the beach, the painters are finishing up and newly upholstered furniture will be delivered soon. The finishing touches for the dinner party tonight are being finalized. The cell phone rings (the twentieth time this morning), and another owner is so pleased with the cook that

E.P.M. secured for him that he would like a nanny of equal caliber. No problem. A call is made and two hours later the meeting between owner and nanny is being scheduled.

And that's just the morning. The day will continue with e-mails, faxes and calls from not just around the contry but around the world. Estate Property Management has turned management of Fine Homes and Estates into a Fine Art, leaving the owners with the leisure time that they came out for in the first place.

First off, how does one learn to schedule, co-ordinate and generally call the shots on multi-million dollar properties. Well, it helps when you've spent the last twelve years of your life as a caretaker/manager/major domo/personal assistant, working on some of the most prestigious properties in the Hamptons (no names please). Or you worked as the personal driver for a very famous director (again, no names please). James Nicolino president of Estate Property Management, has the experience that you can't learn in school or from any other business. "This business is unique in that you are inside the homes of some of the most powerful and influential people. You learn what makes them tick, their likes and dislikes. They want to relax and not be bothered by all the activity. They expect peace and quiet and everything that was supposed to be done, to be done. We have to be a step ahead of what their needs are at all times and deliver service that is nothing short of excellent." But, you say, this is the Hamptons, a place that is notorious for the "we'll get to it when we get to it" attitude. Actually, that's not true, it's more of a matter of overload when everyone comes out at one time and wants it done now. The local people here are some of the hardest working anywhere." So how does E.P.M. bypass the overload. "I am aligned with only the best companies that can handle what I throw at them. They understand the degree of service that is expected of them and they deliver consistently. At this level it's survival of the fittest- and my companies are the fittest."

Most often, growers apply oils with a hose end sprayer. Apply mineral oil with an eyedropper in the ear tips of corn to kill corn earworms.

Labels of most horticultural oil sprays warn against applying them to plants when temperatures are below 40°F or above 90°F. Labels continue to include this advice despite increasing evidence that this temperature range is conservatively narrow. It's more important that the plant shouldn't dry out, and humidity should be low enough (45 to 65 percent) to evaporate quickly.

Actively growing insects or mites are more susceptible than dormant ones. The best time to apply dormant-season oils is after insect dormancy ends in late winter or early spring when insects and diseases resume growth.

Read and follow labeled application instructions and precautions. Irrigate the day before spraying to be sure plants do not lack water. Likewise, spray in the early morning on cloudy days of low humidity (to speed evaporation). Don't apply oil sprays when shoots emerge in spring.

Several plants are susceptible to oil sprays; maples, particularly red maple and Japanese maples; hickories and black walnuts; plume cedar and smoke trees. Injury to these plants can occur from either dormant or summer oil application. Several plants are also somewhat sensitive; redbud, junipers, cedars, speuce, and Douglas firs.

Light yellowing indicates that a summer oil application has burned the foliage. Later, these sites become water-soaked, darken, and die. Terminal or branch dieback indicates damage from a dormant application.

Achieve Freedom from the Obsession of Food and Weight

That is the work and message of Gail Orenstein. Gail is an Eating Disorder Counselor for the Family Service League, and has been running Psycho Educational Support Groups for almost four years. "I have struggled and suffered with a food obsessed life, and found my way out of my nightmare." To overcome this takes patience and a willingness to focus and feel the emotions – the desires that have been numbed and medicated by the misuse of food. It is a process!

Whether it is overeating or not eating, obsessing about food and your weight is a distraction which prevents your from becoming your true and powerful self. It is the way you have learned to cope. You can learn to take the focus off the food and put it on your life.

We know that dieting doesn't work – for all of you who have struggled with this "food obsession" in your lives, you know this. Dieting has you going from A-Z - once again keeping you focused on the food and not on your lives. Your days are determined by and revolved around - Was I good today? Was I bad? Dieting addresses only a part of the process, and does not allow you to get to the root of the problem.

Groups will offer participants the opportunity to:

- learn the difference between stomach hunger versus emotional hunger.

- identify when you are hungry /when you are full.
- alternative ways of nurturing yourself.
- creating a better relationship with your body.
- becoming in touch with the spiritual and creative side of oneself.
- love and compassion

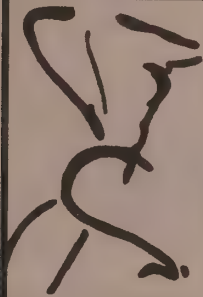

- being media savvy

Gail's practice is about helping those women and men who are "tired of this being an issue in their lives". For any of you who have been on this rollercoaster ride – there is nothing more "freeing" than to get beyond this preoccupation with food. With the guidance and inspiration Gail offers, along with the support of others – this journey is amazing! Learn to listen to your needs and desires – pay attention to your needs and desires- act on your needs and desires and not be afraid to explore them. It's your choice. It's your life. You can live life and learn to break this cycle.

Groups are held at the Family Service League in East Hampton, Hampton Bays, and Gail's home office in Bridgehampton. You can contact Gail Orenstein at 537-5001 or 324-3344.

BLUEBERRIES

Pop a handful of blueberries into your mouth today and it may help you to avoid popping pills later. Scientists have discovered a treasure trove of medical reasons why you should keep your refrigerator stocked with this luscious fruit.

If the blueberry container had a label it might read: Effective in lowering cholesterol, rich in fiber, low in fat and packed with cancer-fighting antioxidants.

Antioxidants are natural substances that work to subdue free radicals, oxygen molecules that are the result of normal metabolism as well as environmental factors like pollution and cigarette smoke.

A free radical molecule has a highly charged, single electron, desperate for a mate. It will zoom around, breaking up another pair, in order to get one. This process, called oxidation, sets off a chain reaction of single electrons looking for a mate. The oxidative stress caused by these reckless free radicals can cause serious damage to healthy cells, leading to cancer, heart disease and a host of other problems.

The good news is that many foods are rich in antioxidants, natural compounds that quench free radicals, neutralizing a potentially disastrous situation.

Researchers at Tufts University tested forty fruits and vegetables and rated blueberries number one for antioxidant potency. In addition to keeping cells intact, antioxidants help prevent LDL, the bad cholesterol, from accumulating in the arteries.

The Tufts study, conducted for the the United States Department of Agriculture, also indicated some anti-aging benefits of the blueberry: improved memory and motor skills by reversing balance and coordination loss. A Japanese study of macular degeneration linked blueberry extract to less blotchy vision.

Farmstand Pharmacy

The antioxidant benefit of blueberries comes from anthocyanin, the blue pigment that gives the berry its name. There is also an antibacterial bonus. The anthocyanin in blueberries is useful in the treatment of urinary tract infections because it prevents bacteria from adhering to the bladder wall, similar to cranberries.

Summertime is the peak season for blueberries so be a smart shopper and think of them as pints of prevention against future pounds of cure.

Skip the trip to a pharmacy by enjoying these recipes today.

Blueberry Smoothie

- 1 c. vanilla yogurt
- 1 small banana
- 1 c. blueberries
- 1 c. orange juice
- 1 tsp. sugar

Mix all of the above in a blender. Garnish with blueberries on a skewer, with strips of orange peel, if desired.

Blueberry Crisp

- 1/4 c. butter or margarine, soft
- 1/2 c. flour
- 1/4 c. sugar

- 1/4 c. brown sugar
- 1/2 c. uncooked oatmeal
- 1 Tbsp. cornstarch
- 1/2 c. sugar
- 1/2 c. water
- 6 cups (3 pints) fresh blueberries

Preheat oven to 350. Butter a 9" x 13" pan. Combine butter and flour. Stir in 1/4 c. sugar, brown sugar and oats until crumbly.

In a medium saucepan, combine cornstarch and 1/2 c. sugar. Stir in water and 3 cups of berries. Cook over medium heat until it boils. Boil for 1 minute and remove from heat.

Add remaining 3 cups of berries. Pour into baking dish and sprinkle top with crumbs. Bake 25 minutes or until crisp and golden brown on top. Makes 8 - 10 servings.

Blueberry Dessert Salsa

- 2 cups frozen or fresh blueberries
- 3/4 cup diced mixed fruit (such as apples, cantalope, mango or kiwi)
- 1 T. lime juice
- 2 to 3 tsp. sugar
- 1/2 t. grated lime peel
- 1/4 t. ground allspice

In a small bowl combine blueberries, mixed fruit, lime juice, sugar, lime peel and allspice. Serve immediately or refrigerate covered, up to 4 hours. Serve over sliced pound cake or vanilla ice cream, if desired.

Yield: 2 1/4 cups

Balance Is Important For Healthful Weight Loss

High-protein, low-carbohydrate diets, like disco and bell bottoms, were big in the 1970's and made a come back in the 1990's.

According to most nutrition experts, high-protein, low-carbohydrate diets are unhealthy because they don't follow the U.S. Department of Agriculture's (USDA's) Food Guide Pyramid. For example, fad diets suggest you rule out healthful foods such as potatoes and carrots. That's not a good idea. Vegetables such as potatoes are naturally fat-free, high in vitamin C and potassium, and provide a good source of vitamin B6 and fiber. And, according to the European Journal of Clinical Nutrition, potatoes are considered the most filling food-providing the most satisfaction for the least amount of calories.

Mindy Hermann, RD, answers some of the most common questions about the current crop of fad diets:

Can a high-protein, low-carbohydrate diet lead to successful weight loss?

High-protein, low-carbohydrate diets are very low in calories, which is the main reason that people lose weight while following them. When carbohydrates are eliminated, the body loses water along with any fat. Also, when you don't eat enough calories, your metabolism drops, and you aren't able to burn as many calories. As soon as you're off a high-protein, low-carbohydrate diet, you'll gain the weight back-and probably extra pounds, too.

Can't I just take a vitamin-mineral supplement to make up for any potential nutrient deficiencies?

A supplement can replace lost nutrients, but cannot make up for lost phytochemicals. Phytochemicals are naturally occurring compounds in plant foods that are being researched for their potential to reduce the risk of certain health problems, such as cancer, cardiovascular disease, arthritis and hypertension. As of yet, supplements cannot replace all of the phytochemicals you would get by eating a balanced diet that includes fruits and vegetables.

What are the most effective ways to lose weight?

To lose weight, try to eat healthfully most of the time. Not only is this way of eating easier than "dieting," it's also more realistic. Also, try to eat smaller portions of food, especially when dining out.

A helpful guide for eating well is the USDA's Food Guide Pyramid. The food guide pyramid suggests you aim for five or more servings of fruits and vegetables per day, and consume no more than 30 percent of total calories from fat.

Let yourself indulge occasionally. You don't have to forgo eating your favorite foods-all foods can fit into a healthful eating plan.

Finally, exercise. Start slowly, and reward yourself when you exercise consistently. If you're strapped for time, make small changes, such as using the stairs instead of the elevator, or going for a walk during lunch.

POLICE BLOTTER

A passerby noticed a GMC pickup truck in the water at Clearwater Beach Marina and called the police. East Hampton Town Police responded with a dive team, but found no driver or passengers. After extracting the truck from the water, a rental contract led police to a Springs residence where they found the 29-year-old driver in bed, fast asleep. He was issued a ticket for leaving the scene of an accident.

Another case of an amphibious driver occurred in East Hampton Village. The car was heading west on Main Street, when it crossed the road, rolled over several times and landed right side up in Town Pond. The driver, a 31-year-old from Westhampton Beach, was charged with driving while intoxicated.

An East Hampton man had a crappy experience. He noticed that the front door of his Crooked Highway residence had been smeared with feces and toilet paper.

In Southampton, somebody entered a Chivas Court residence and cooked up some trash. The culinary criminal put garbage on the electric stove and left it on, resulting in a small fire.

An unknown thirsty thief broke into a car parked at Kirk Park in Montauk and stole seven cans of Diet Coke. Nothing else was taken, but a new window will cost $150.

The manager of the East Hampton Airport asked a woman not to use her laptop in the airport office. She apparently was doing some very important work, as she got up and slapped the man's glasses off of his face. Police have not released the angry laptop user's name. No arrests were made, as the slapping has been deemed a "domestic incident."

Carl T. Morgan, 34, of Southampton, allegedly offered someone a ride to a local bar on Jobs Lane. When they arrived he allegedly demanded money from his passenger. When the rider did not pay, Morgan allegedly hit him about the head with a tire iron. Morgan was arrested and charged with felony assault and weapons possession. He was sent to the Suffolk County Jail in lieu of $10,000 bail. The victim was treated and released at Southampton Hospital.

Southampton Village Police stopped a 17-year-old Southampton youth after reports that the youth was driving near Little Plains Beach and tossing beer bottles from his car. Police found the youth under the influence of marijuana. He was arrested and charged with driving under the influence of marijuana and possession of marijuana, both violations. The youth has been charged as an adult, but his name was withheld.

Peter C. Opatovsky, 22, of Shoreham was warned five times, by five different Southampton Town Police officers over a 45 minute period that he was too drunk to drive. He hopped into his car anyway and was promptly arrested for DWI. The incident occurred just after 8 p.m. on Montauk Highway in Hampton Bays.

Dan's LETTERS

"SUNSET JAZZ" BATTLES MILLSTONE

Dear Dan,

The "Sunset Jazz at Quail Hill" will be held on August 5th at Quail Hill Preserve in Amagansett from 6-8:30p.m. to benefit the legal efforts of the Coalition Against Millstone. As you know, numerous environmental and health organizations from Connecticut and Long Island have joined together to form the Coalition Against Millstone (CAM) to force the permanent closure of the Millstone Nuclear Power Station. Presently, the legal efforts of the Coalition are as follows:

1) Co-plaintiff in a Connecticut lawsuit aimed at closing Millstone based on violations of state water laws. The Clean Water Act permit they operate under was expired in 1997 and we have challenged the legality of the "emergency extension" granted. This was just argued on appeal before the Connecticut Supreme Court and has the potential for broad reaching impact in the industry.

2) Co-petitioner in an action before the Nuclear Regulatory Commission to oppose an application by Northeast Utilities to double the capacity of its spent fuel pool at the Millstone Unit 3 reactor. Essentially, they seek to store their spent fuel rods closer together. This would mean that the probability of an accident is increased and the consequences become more severe. Hearings begin again on July 17.

3) Co-petitioner in several lawsuits aimed at prohibiting Millstone from killing large numbers of winter flounder and larvae. Portions of Millstone are not equipped with a fish return system and we are seeking the instillation of such a system to prevent the further degradation of the winter flounder population in Long Island Sound. In fact, a Connecticut State Department of Environmental Protection memorandum has shown that the reactors have depleted the Niantic River winter flounder population by as much as 23 percent a year and this impact is required, by law, to be minimized.

Thank you again and I look forward to a successful event.

Sincerely,
Scott M. Cullen
East Hampton

SEEKING HOME FOR A LOVELY DOG

Dear Dan,

"Doggie Dish" is an excellent piece which ought to be required reading for anyone thinking of adopting or buying a pet. How about these people who get a pup or kitten "for the summer", then leave it behind, telling their kids that "someone will give it a good home." How many of these same people would even consider adopting a child for the summer, then returning it to its foster home? Keep up the good work!

Also, I do have an ulterior motive. May I have my friend Ana send you a write-up on Eva, a lovely dog Ana found five months ago on the streets of the South Bronx? Ana has 13 cats she has rescued and can't keep Eva. Right now Eva lives in the basement and the cats have the first floor apartment. Ana spends her nights with Eva. I have tried everything, Internet, Rescues, etc. etc. I have taken Eva to dog shows and "worked the crowds." Everyone loves her. But most people who love dogs already have at least two, sometimes more. Eva is sweet, loving, eager to lean and obey, but she is a Pit Bull Terrier, and so far no one has the right situation for her. She should be in a home with another large dog, probably a neutered male. She loves to play, but she's so gentle you can take a treat out of her mouth and she will not snap or growl. She's about a year and a half, spayed, vet-checked, and has all her shots. She is all white and weighs 54 pounds. I have trained her to sit, come and a little bit of stay. I have two Schipperkes and can't adopt her myself since my city apartment is very small, though my Shelter Island place is pretty big. Would you be willing to look over the write-up and perhaps help us find Eva a good home out here?

ATTENTION TO DETAIL

In the Hamptons it seems nearly everybody is calling themselves a builder. But most don't know that a "builder" isn't just a sports utility vehicle. The local firm that has designed and built this home is truly in a class by themselves. The sweeping lines of the wood shingled roof encase 4500 sq. ft. of the finest workmanship and every room is special including a grand living room which has a soaring, paneled fireplace, the exterior site work around the gunite pool features extensive use of river stone. A must see! $1,695,000

Horny Goat Weed may not sound serious, but its advanced phyto nutritional formula is designed to give you a serious boost in those areas of life where you may be a little lacking.

Sure, you're a legend in your own mind. Yeah, you're an animal in the gym. But what if you could feel as powerful and confident in the bedroom as you do in the weight room?

Based on the latest clinical studies, Pinnacle Horny Goat Weed™ is a high-speed stimulant for life and love in the fast lane.

Each safe, highly potent, all-natural capsule contains: Horny Goat Weed, L-Dopa, Maca, 20 ECD and other aphrodisiac herbs and botanicals.

Pinnacle Horny Goat Weed. It may be just what you need.
